— Under date of January 23, 1594, Henslowe makes note in his diary of a new play, "titus & ondronicus," performed by the servants of the Earl of Sussex. On February 6 of the same year there is entered to John Danter in the Stationers' Register a book entitled A Noble Roman Historye of Tytus Andronicus. An edition published in 1594 was mentioned by Gerard Langbaine in his Account of English Dramatic Poets, in 1691, and a copy of it was at last discovered at Malmö, Sweden, in 1905. It bears the title: "The most Lamentable Romaine Tragedie of Titus Andronicus: as it was Plaide by the Right Honorable the Earle of Darbie, Earle of Pembroke and Earle of Sussex their Servants, London. Printed by John Danter, etc., 1594."

The Second Quarto (1600) gives a like account of itself on the title-page except for the name of another company still, the Lord Chamberlain's, and the name of another printer. Though the changes in this text are on the whole few and slight, there are two omissions, one of six lines in the first scene of the play and another of five lines in the last. From the Second Quarto a third was printed in 1611, and from this, but for the addition of a scene in the third act, was printed the First Folio. The text of the present edition is based on the Second Quarto, amended at some points by the substitution of readings from the First.

— There is every reason to believe that the play as we have it is not only that entered in the Stationers' Register in February but also that mentioned as new ("ne") by Henslowe in January. Before the discovery of the First Quarto, Henslowe's memorandum was thought by some to refer to the English original — from another hand than Shakespeare's — of a Dutch play by Jan Vos, entitled Aran en Titus, printed in 1641, and of a lost German play, acted at Linz in 1699, of which only a program remains. Another play, "tittus and vespacia," also marked "ne," mentioned by Henslowe as performed on April 11, 1591, was thought to be a still earlier version of the story, the original of another German play, entitled Tito Andronico, published in 1620, in which Lucius appears under the name Vespasianus. "Ne" often means no more than newly revised, and a previous version (if not two such) of the play there probably was. Very likely this, and not the present text, was carried over into Holland and Germany by English actors, known to have played there in the last year or so of the sixteenth century. For the Dutch and German pieces betray likenesses to each other and differences from the English text that point to a common source beyond it, as well as traits of an Elizabethan dramatic art of a more old-fashioned type.¹

But we cannot hope to discover a previous version in Henslowe's entry in 1594. Later than the first days of 1594 the man who probably had already penned The Two ¹ For a comparison of the Dutch and German with the English version see an article by H. de W. Fuller in Publications of the Modern Language Association of America, vol. xvi, 1901.

Gentlemen of Verona and Richard III could hardly have written our play without writing it better, and if it was new in January of that year, it would not have required re-touching for several years to come. Much earlier than the middle of the year before he could not have written it, because he has echoed phrases and passages from Peele's Honour of the Garter, which was written to celebrate an event that took place on June 26, 1593. The only trace of an early version is "tittus and vespacia." Although these symbols may have to do rather with the Flavian emperors, they seem to furnish evidence, otherwise missing in Henslowe, of the known popularity of the play. Of the later version there are recorded in his diary only five performances, and of the older ten.

— Few now maintain that Shakespeare wrote the play at first hand, and most English critics in the last two centuries stoutly aver that he did no more than Edward Ravenscroft in 1687 said that he did: "I have been told by some anciently conversant with the stage that it was not originally his but brought by a private author to be acted, and he only gave some master touches to one or two of the principal parts or characters." But the wisest of these, setting little store by Ravenscroft, whose sincerity of purpose, by the way, Langbaine discredits, take their stand upon an un-Shakespearean quality in the style, the unmitigated horror of the fable, and the absence of Shakespeare's name on the title-pages of the quartos. This last circumstance seems outweighed, however, by the explicit mention of the play in the catalogue of Shakespeare's tragedies by Francis Meres in 1598, the inclusion of it in the First Folio by Shakespeare's friends and fellow-actors, Heminge and Condell, and the fact that the poet's name is missing on several of the other early quartos, as doubtless not yet commercially valuable.

In enforcing their impression of the un-Shakespearean quality of the style the critics have had recourse to arguments derived from vocabulary, phrasing, and metre. With the last no case has been made. But there are words in Titus Andronicus which appear nowhere else in Shakespeare, though found in Peele, Greene, Kyd, and Lodge. There are phrases which resemble those of these poets, and a very few which may have been directly borrowed from Peele and possibly from the others. Hence has been inferred the authorship of Peele, or, according to some critics, of all the four. By this process of reasoning, as has been said, every man's hand may be found in every other man's play.¹ In Elizabethan times collaboration was no rare thing, but at the same time it must be borne in mind that poets then were all of one flock and fold, moved as by one impulse, drew from one common stock of sentiment, phrase, and figure, and wrote like other poets, not like Browning to suit themselves. Their whole vocation was endless imitation. Hence recurrence of word or phrase, as of character and situation, is to be thought due, if not to a closer communion of spirits than poets now enjoy, to the imitation of another poet rather than to that poet's actually putting in an appearance for himself.

¹ For an extreme, though scholarly, example of this method see Did Shakespeare Write "Titus Andronicus"? by John M. Robertson, London, 1905.

Peele's, moreover, was not the hand to delineate the "splendid lunacy" of Titus, with his "miserable, mad, mistaking eyes," or the burly villainy of Aaron. Peele's Moor, Muly Mahamet, is but a shadow of Marlowe's Tamburlaine, and Tamburlaine and the Jew Barabas themselves are phantoms when put in the scale with Aaron. Like Barabas a mythical Machiavel, that is, a gloating, swaggering murderer, egoist, atheist, and limb of Satan, supposed, in accordance with the inflamed Elizabethan fancy of the way things were going in the world, to be living by the rule of the Florentine Machiavelli, not of Christ, he is nevertheless no fawning, sentimental son of Belial like the Jew of Malta, or mere mouthpiece for bragging hyperbole and frenzied mythological rant. He keeps cool like Richard Crookback and Iago, and is somewhat more — or, rather, less — than ogre or hobgoblin. His humour is, if the apparent pun be allowed, good-humoured, not confined, like the grinning malice and gleeful hypocrisy of Barabas, to the base considerations of profit and loss; and he gives it play, not unlike a man of this world, in easy-going, colloquial terms:

Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you hence:
For it is you that puts us to our shifts.

. . . their mother,

As sure a card as ever won the set.

As he speaks of the mother, so of the child. Shakespeare is the first Elizabethan, perhaps the first of dramatists, to conceive and cope with that interesting situation, the villain with the new-born child of his body in his arms.

Barabas speaks of Abigail and to her in lofty tones and tender cadences :

whom I hold as dear
As Agamemnon did his Iphigen,
And all I have is hers ;

later to curse her with all the fury of a demon. When he loves her he is not Barabas ; but Aaron takes up his thick-lipped brat with a chuckle of paternal complacence quite in his vein :

Here's a young lad fram'd of another leer :
Look how the black slave smiles upon his father,
As who should say ' Old lad, I am thine own.'¹

No Agamemnonian hero this, but a dog — a brute — of a man, fondling his whelp. Unlike Barabas, unlike Tamora in the play, and nearly all of the other fierce men and women in the early Elizabethan drama when they stoop to the language of love and affection, he does not drop into sentiment too delicate and mincing for his lips.

Aaron and Titus apart, however, not much can be said for the originality of the characters, or for their likeness to others of Shakespeare's. Titus himself is not much like Lear, nor Tamora like Lady Macbeth. But surely there is something in the suggestion that the Clown is one of the characters who are Shakespeare's own, not because of his quibbling and reckless confounding of words, but because of his saying to Titus when he takes him for an angel: "From heaven! alas, Sir, I never came there. God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days," or, in more familiar phrase, "I would be loath to pay him before his day." The man who wrote either was not Peele, Greene, or Marlowe, if we know them, but the man who wrote: "Now I to comfort him bid him he should not think of God; I hoped there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet:" — a man who above all others took delight in a rude and cheerful soul who is loath to enter into the kingdom.

Another character not in Peele's vein but decidedly in Shakespeare's is Young Lucius. The youth in The Battle of Alcazar has no character at all, but Lucius is like Prince Edward in Marlowe's Edward II, and in his affectionateness and intrepidity, his eagerness to fight or to revenge his family's wrongs, and his somewhat plaintive and self-conscious pathos he is still more like Prince Arthur in King John and the young princes in Richard III.

As for the blood and thunder and the parade of Latin and classical allusion at which the critics stumble, are they more than is to be expected, being part of the current tradition in the Senecan type of tragedy then in vogue? Titus Andronicus is no more unlike Shakespeare's other earliest histories and tragedies than Love's Labour's Lost or The Comedy of Errors is unlike his other comedies. Here he but outdid Marlowe and Kyd as there he outdid Lyly and Plautus. A god come down among men, he eclipses them all, in their vices as in their virtues. With no such excuse for it as in a Roman play, all of Shakespeare's early work is sprinkled with Latin and abounds in classical allusion; purely classical in subject are his two long poems, and one of them has two lines of Latin for a motto. Likewise his early histories and tragedies, Henry VI and Richard III, as for that matter Hamlet and King Lear (witness Gloster's eyes!), abound in blood. In the Epilogue to Selimus, a play which belongs to the same year as Titus, the hero holds out the promise of "greater murders" in the Second Part. In 1581 Robert Wilson was thought to be the man to write a play then desired, "full of all sorts of murders, immorality, and robberies." Such a desire was in that day no base and degenerate one either, for not otherwise Scaliger, one of the authoritative critics of the Renaissance, had defined the scope of tragedy.

— The source of Shakespeare was, as we have seen, an old play or plays. The author of one of these may have been Peele, and if it was, some tricks of style could be explained, as well as some Senecan traits of narration (instead of Shakespeare's direct presentment) which appear in the Dutch and German versions. However that may be, the main features of Shakespeare's story, not to be found in the Dutch or German versions, are: the rivalry between Saturninus and Bassianus for the throne; the funeral of Titus's sons killed in war; the sacrifice of Alarbus: the kidnapping of Lavinia by Bassianus, with the death of Mutius; the sending of young Lucius with presents to the sons of Tamora; and the whole of the second scene of the third act, which appears only in the First Folio and is perhaps a later addition. Perhaps there is more significance in what Shakespeare suppresses —

the gross obscenity of the Moor's confessions concerning his past life, and the burning of him alive on the stage, in the Dutch version. These may indeed be the additions of the travelling actors or of the Dutch and Germans themselves, but it would be like Shakespeare to suppress obscenity when there is no joke at stake, or tortures like these penal fires, which remind us, by the way, of the boiling cauldron of Barabas, and are one of the most striking evidences of the existence of an earlier play.¹

— At the same time as our play there was entered in the Stationers' Register "alsoe the ballad thereof," and if it be the same as that entitled Titus Andronicus's Complaint, in Percy's Reliques, the play is the source of it. Another ballad, in the Roxburghe collection, entitled A lamentable Ballad of the Tragical end of a Gallant Lord and a Vertuous Lady, with the untimely end of their two Children, wickedly performed by a Heathenish Blackamoore their Servant: the like never heard of, tells practically the same story as the twenty-first novel in the third book of Bandello, a translation of which was entered in the Stationers' Register on July 22, 1569-1570. The story is of a black slave who, beaten by his master, revenges himself by ravishing his mistress, killing one of the children, inducing his master to cut off his nose on the promise of saving the lives of the others, and killing them, with a laugh, nevertheless. In a manuscript of the thirteenth or fourteenth century in the Erlangen Library there is a collection of exempla which contains a similar story, that of a slave who gets his master's son in his power and, on the strength of a hypocritical promise to save his life, induces his master to pluck out his own eyes.

Other indebtedness has been traced to various classical sources. The name Andronicus was borne by an emperor of Constantinople, surnamed Comnenus, who, like Titus, shot arrows with missives attached, not up to the gods but over the walls of Prusa. Tamora, Queen of the Goths, is probably a reminiscence of that Tomyris, Queen of the Getae (Goths they were to Touchstone) who revenged the death of her son on Cyrus. And the story of Lavinia is much the same as that of Philomela and Progne, constantly referred to in the text, which Ovid's verse spread far and wide in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance.

— Two influences presided at the making of the play — that of Kyd and that of Marlowe. The latter's influence is almost confined to the character of Aaron, analyzed above, and to the style and versification. Throughout the play Marlowe's thundering line and high-astounding terms prevail over the crabbed and pedantic bombast of Kyd. But to Kyd is due the type of the play as a whole, the Senecan species which he domesticated and popularized in The Spanish Tragedy and probably in the earlier Hamlet. In this the motive is revenge, not revenge for personal satisfaction, but as a sacred duty and in obedience to the powers above. Ghosts, indeed, there are none, yet in orthodox fashion the hero appeals for justice to the divinities supernal and infernal and to earth and heaven. There are Senecan omens and premonitions, murder and mutilation, and a Thyestean cannibal banquet. And as in Kyd, a father is engaged in avenging his murdered children, goes mad from passion and mad in craft, and himself falls under the avalanche of ruin which he precipitates at the end.

— Of all Elizabethan tragedies the most popular, it would seem, were the bloody four — Kyd's Spanish Tragedy, the Hamlet of Kyd and of Shakespeare, Marlowe's Jew of Malta, and Titus Andronicus. Fifteen times the play is entered in Henslowe's book (if all the Titus and Andronicus plays be taken together), and according to Henslowe and the title-pages five¹ different companies played it. Contemporary allusions to it were numerous and the popularity of the play is shown even by the later scornful allusions, as that of Jonson, in Bartholomew Fair (1614), to those playgoers "who swear Ieronimo and Andronicus are the best plays yet."

In 1687 Ravenscroft published his revision, acted in 1678, which bears the sub-title "the Rape of Lavinia." Although he boasts of having "refined the language, heightened the characters, and increased the plot," he seems to have added vastly to the horror of it, in so far as to have Tamora kill her child herself, and Aaron, who thereupon offers to eat it, racked and burned on the stage. It is this version only that found favour henceforth in the theatre. Revived at Drury Lane in 1717, it was said in the advertisement to have been acted "but twice these fifteen years." James Quin was Aaron, and he played him again in 1720 and 1721. In 1852-1856 the piece was acted in London and Dublin by Ira Aldridge, the "African Roscius," and as it was then announced to be the first performance in two hundred years the text was probably that of Shakespeare, though, according to the testimony of spectators, much curtailed. Aldridge had difficulty in persuading his company to play it, and he thought good to follow it with a farce called "Mummy" and a song called "Possum up a gum tree." And that was the end of Titus and Aaron on the stage.

The Tragedy of Titus Andronicus

ACT FIRST

SCENE I

[Rome. Before the Senate-house. The Tomb of the Andronici appearing.]

Enter the Tribunes and Senators aloft, and then enter Saturninus and his Followers at one door, and Bassianus and his Followers at the other; with drums and trumpets.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms,
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords.
I am his first-born son, that was the last 5
That wore the imperial diadem of Rome;
Then let my father's honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans, friends, followers, favourers of my right,
If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son, 10

Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.
Let us entreat, by honour of his name,
Whom worthily you would have now succeed, 40
And in the Capitol and senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,
That you withdraw you and abate your strength,
Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should,
Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness. 45

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts !

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy
In thy uprightness and integrity,
And so I love and honour thee and thine,
Thy noble brother Titus and his sons, 50
And her to whom my thoughts are humbled all,
Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving friends,
And to my fortunes and the people's favour
Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd. 55

Exeunt soldiers [of Bassianus].

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right,
I thank you all and here dismiss you all,
And to the love and favour of my country
Commit myself, my person, and the cause.

[Exeunt soldiers of Saturninus.]

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me 60
As I am confident and kind to thee.
Open the gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor.

Flourish. They go up into the Senate-house.

Enter a Captain.

Cap. Romans, make way! The good Andronicus,
 Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion, 65
 Successful in the battles that he fights,
 With honour and with fortune is return'd
 From where he circumscribed with his sword,
 And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Drums and trumpets sounded, and then enter two of Titus's sons [Martius and Mutius]; and then two Men bearing a coffin covered with black; then two other sons [Lucius and Quintus]. Then Titus Andronicus; and then Tamora, the Queen of Goths with her [three] sons [Alarbus,] Demetrius, and Chiron; Aaron the Moor, and others as many as can be. They set down the coffin, and Titus speaks.

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds!
 Lo, as the bark that hath discharg'd her fraught 71
 Returns with precious lading to the bay
 From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,
 Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
 To re-salute his country with his tears, 75
 Tears of true joy for his return to Rome.
 Thou great defender of this Capitol,

Stand gracious to the rites that we intend !
 Romans, of five and twenty valiant sons,
 Half of the number that King Priam had, 80
 Behold the poor remains, alive and dead !
 These that survive let Rome reward with love,
 These that I bring unto their latest home
 With burial amongst their ancestors.
 Here Goths have given me leave to sheathe my sword. 85

Titus, unkind and careless of thine own,
 Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet,
 To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx ?
 Make way to lay them by their brethren.

They open the tomb.

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont, 90
 And sleep in peace, slain in your country's wars !
 O sacred receptacle of my joys,
 Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,
 How many sons hast thou of mine in store,
 That thou wilt never render to me more ! 95

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths,
 That we may hew his limbs and on a pile
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh
 Before this earthy prison of their bones ;
 That so the shadows be not unappeas'd, 100
 Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you, the noblest that survives,
 The eldest son of this distressed queen.

- Tam.* Stay, Roman brethren ! Gracious conqueror,
 Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed, 105
 A mother's tears in passion for her son ;
 And if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
 O, think my son to be as dear to me !
 Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome,
 To beautify thy triumphs and return, 110
 Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke,
 But must my sons be slaught' red in the streets
 For valiant doings in their country's cause ?
 O, if to fight for king and commonweal
 Were piety in thine, it is in these. 115
 Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood !
 Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods ?
 Draw near them, then, in being merciful ;
 Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge.
 Thrice noble Titus, spare my first-born son ! 120
- Tit.* Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me.
 These are their brethren, whom your Goths beheld
 Alive and dead ; and for their brethren slain
 Religiously they ask a sacrifice.
 To this your son is mark'd, and die he must, 125
 To appease their groaning shadows that are gone.
- Luc.* Away with him ! and make a fire straight ;
 And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,
 Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consum'd.
Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius, with Alarbus.

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety! 130

Chi. Was never Scythia half so barbarous.

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest ; and we survive

To tremble under Titus' threat'ning look.

Then, madam, stand resolv'd, but hope withal 135

The self-same gods that arm'd the Queen of Troy

With opportunity of sharp revenge

Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,

May favour Tamora, the Queen of Goths —

When Goths were Goths and Tamora was queen —

140

To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius [with their swords bloody].

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd

Our Roman rites. Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,

And entrails feed the sacrificing fire,

Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky.

145

Remaineth nought but to inter our brethren,

And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so ; and let Andronicus

Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

Trumpets sounded, and the coffin laid in the tomb.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons ; 150

Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in rest,
 Secure from worldly chances and mishaps !
 Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
 Here grow no damned drugs ; here are no storms,
 No noise, but silence and eternal sleep. 155
 In peace and honour rest you here, my sons !

Enter Lavinia.

- Lav.* In peace and honour live Lord Titus long,
 My noble lord and father, live in fame !
 Lo, at this tomb my tributary tears
 I render, for my brethren's obsequies ; 160
 And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy
 Shed on this earth for thy return to Rome.
 O, bless me here with thy victorious hand,
 Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud !
- Tit.* Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserv'd 165
 The cordial of mine age to glad my heart !
 Lavinia, live ; outlive thy father's days
 And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise !
- Marc.* Long live Lord Titus, my beloved brother,
 Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome ! 170
- Tit.* Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother Marcus.
- Marc.* And welcome, nephews, from successful wars,
 You that survive, and you that sleep in fame !
 Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
 That in your country's service drew your swords ; 175

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,
 That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness
 And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.
 Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
 Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been, 180
 Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust,
 This palliament of white and spotless hue ;
 And name thee in election for the empire,
 With these our late-deceased emperor's sons.
 Be candidatus then, and put it on, 185
 And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits
 Than his that shakes for age and feebleness.
 What should I don this robe, and trouble you ?
 Be chosen with proclamations to-day, 190
 To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,
 And set abroad new business for you all ?
 Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
 And led my country's strength successfully,
 And buried one and twenty valiant sons, 195
 Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,
 In right and service of their noble country.
 Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
 But not a sceptre to control the world ;
 Upright he held it, lords, that held it last. 200

Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empery.

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell ?

Tit. Patience, Prince Saturninus.

 robe
 -humble

- Sat.* Romans, do me right.
 Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them not Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor. 205
 Andronicus, would thou were shipp'd to hell,
 Rather than rob me of the people's hearts !
- Luc.* Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good
 That noble-minded Titus means to thee !
- Tit.* Content thee, Prince ; I will restore to thee 210
 The people's hearts, and wean them from themselves.
- Bas.* Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
 But honour thee, and will do till I die. '
 My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,
 I will most thankful be ; and thanks to men 215
 Of noble minds is honourable meed.
- Tit.* People of Rome, and people's tribunes here,
 I ask your voices and your suffrages.
 Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus ?
- Tribunes.* To gratify the good Andronicus, 220
 And congratulate his safe return to Rome,
 The people will accept whom he admits.
- Tit.* Tribunes, I thank you ; and this suit I make,
 That you create our emperor's eldest son,
 Lord Saturnine ; whose virtues will, I hope, 225
 Reflect on Rome as Titan's rays on earth,
 And ripen justice in this commonweal.
 Then, if you will elect by my advice,
 Crown him, and say, "Long live our emperor !"

Marc. With voices and applause of every sort, 230
Patricians and plebeians, we create
Lord Saturninus Rome's great emperor,
And say, "Long live our Emperor Saturnine!"

A long flourish till they come down.

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done
To us in our election this day, 235
I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts,
And will with deeds requite thy gentleness;
And, for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name and honourable family,
Lavinia will I make my empress, 240
Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,
And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse.
Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord; and in this match
I hold me highly honoured of your Grace: 245
And here in sight of Rome to Saturnine,
King and commander of our commonweal,
The wide world's emperor, do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners;
Presents well worthy Rome's imperious lord. 250
Receive them, then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life!
How proud I am of thee and of thy gifts
Rome shall record, and when I do forget 255

The least of these unspeakable deserts,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. [To Tamora.] Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor ;

To him that, for your honour and your state,
Will use you nobly and your followers. 260

Sat. A goodly lady, trust me, of the hue
That I would choose, were I to choose anew. —
Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance ;
Though chance of war hath wrought this change
of cheer,

Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome ; 265
Princely shall be thy usage every way.

Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes. Madam, he comforts you
Can make you greater than the Queen of Goths.
Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this ? 270

Lav. Not I, my lord ; sith true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy.

Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia. Romans, let us go ;
Ransomless here we set our prisoners free.
Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump and drum. 275

[Flourish. Saturninus courts Tamora in dumb show.]

Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine.
[Seizing Lavinia.]

Tit. How, sir ! Are you in earnest then, my lord ?

Bas. Ay, noble Titus ; and resolv'd withal
To do myself this reason and this right.

Marc. "Suum cuique" is our Roman justice ; 280
This prince in justice seizeth but his own.

Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius live.

Tit. Traitors, avaunt ! Where is the Emperor's guard ?
Treason, my lord ! Lavinia is surpris'd !

Sat. Surpris'd ! By whom ?

Bas. By him that justly may
Bear his betroth'd from all the world away. 286
[Exeunt Bassianus and Marcus with Lavinia.]

Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away,
And with my sword I'll keep this door safe.
[Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.]

Tit. Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back. 289

Mut. My lord, you pass not here.

Tit. What, villain boy !
Barr'st me my way in Rome ?

Mut. Help, Lucius, help !
[Logic is gone Titus kills him.]

[During the fray, exeunt Saturninus, Tamora, Demetrius, Chiron, and Aaron.]

[Re-enter Lucius.]

Luc. My lord, you are unjust, and, more than so,
In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.

Tit. Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of mine ;

My sons would never so dishonour me. 295

Traitor, restore Lavinia to the Emperor.

Luc. Dead, if you will ; but not to be his wife

That is another's lawful promis'd love. [Exit.]

Re-enter aloft Saturninus with Tamora and her two sons, and Aaron.

Sat. No, Titus, no ; the Emperor needs her not,
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock. 300

I'll trust, by leisure, him that mocks me once ;

Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,

Confederates all thus to dishonour me.

Was there none else in Rome to make a stale

But Saturnine ? Full well, Andronicus, 305

Agree these deeds with that proud brag of thine,

That said'st I begg'd the empire at thy hands.

Tit. O monstrous ! what reproachful words are these ?

Sat. But go thy ways ; go, give that changing piece

To him that flourish'd for her with his sword. 310

A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy,

One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons,

To ruffle in the commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are razors to my wounded heart. 314

Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, Queen of Goths,

That like the stately Phœbe 'mongst her nymphs

Dost overshadow the gallant'st dames of Rome,

If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,

Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,

And will create thee Empress of Rome. 320 Speak, Queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice ?

And here I swear by all the Roman gods,
 Sith priest and holy water are so near
 And tapers burn so bright and everything
 In readiness for Hymenæus stand, 325
 I will not re-salute the streets of Rome,
 Or climb my palace, till from forth this place
 I lead espous'd my bride along with me.

Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome I swear,
 If Saturnine advance the Queen of Goths, 330
 She will a handmaid be to his desires,
 A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon ; lords, accompany
 Your noble emperor and his lovely bride,
 Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine, 335
 Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered ;
 There shall we consummate our spousal rites.

Exeunt all [but Titus].

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride.
 Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone,
 Dishonoured thus, and challenged of wrongs ? 340

Re-enter Marcus, Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.

Marc. O Titus, see, O, see what thou hast done !
 In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish tribune, no ; no son of mine,

Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed
 That hath dishonoured all our family ; 345
 Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons !

Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes ;
 Give Mutius burial with our brethren.

Tit. Traitors, away ! he rests not in this tomb.
 This monument five hundred years hath stood,
 Which I have sumptuously re-edified. 351
 Here none but soldiers and Rome's servitors
 Repose in fame ; none basely slain in brawls.
 Bury him where you can ; he comes not here.

Marc. My lord, this is impiety in you. 355
 My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him ;
 He must be buried with his brethren.

Quin. }
Mart. } And shall, or him we will accompany.

Tit. "And shall !" What villain was it spake that word ?

Quin. He that would vouch it in any place but here.

Tit. What, would you bury him in my despite ? 361

Marc. No, noble Titus, but entreat of thee
 To pardon Mutius and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest,
 And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast wounded. 365

My foes I do repute you every one ;
 So, trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Luc. He is not with himself ; let us withdraw.

Mart. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.

Marcus and the sons of Titus kneel.

Marc. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead, — 370

Mart. Father, and in that name doth nature speak, —

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.

Marc. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul, —

Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all, —

Marc. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter 375

His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,
That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.

Thou art a Roman, be not barbarous.

The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax
That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son 380

Did graciously plead for his funerals.

Let not young Mutius, then, that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise.

The dismall'st day is this that e'er I saw,
To be dishonoured by my sons in Rome! 385

Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

Mutius is put into the tomb.

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,

Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb.

All. (Kneeling.) No man shed tears for noble Mutius;
He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause. 390

Excunt all but Marcus and Titus.

Marc. My lord, to step out of these dreary dumps,
 How comes it that the subtle Queen of Goths
 Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome ?

Tit. I know not, Marcus, but I know it is ;
 Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell.
 Is she not then beholding to the man 396
 That brought her for this high good turn so far ?
 [Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.]

Flourish. Re-enter Saturninus, Tamora, Demetrius, Chiron, and Aaron at one door ; enter, at the other door, Bassianus, Lavinia, with others.

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play'd your prize.
 God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride ! 400

Bas. And you of yours, my lord ! I say no more,
 Nor wish no less ; and so, I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law or we have power,
 Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my own,
 My true betrothed love and now my wife ? 406
 But let the laws of Rome determine all ;
 Meanwhile I am possess'd of that is mine.

Sat. 'Tis good, sir ; you are very short with us ;
 But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you. 410

Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I may Answer I must, and shall do with my life.
 Only thus much I give your Grace to know :

By all the duties that I owe to Rome,
This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here, 415
Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd ;
That in the rescue of Lavinia
With his own hand did slay his youngest son,
In zeal to you and highly mov'd to wrath
To be controll'd in that he frankly gave. 420
Receive him, then, to favour, Saturnine,
That hath express'd himself in all his deeds
A father and a friend to thee and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds ; 424
'Tis thou and those that have dishonoured me.
Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,
How I have lov'd and honoured Saturnine !

Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora
Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,
Then hear me speak indifferently for all ; 430
And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

Sat. What, madam ! be dishonoured openly
And basely put it up without revenge ?

Tam. Not so, my lord ; the gods of Rome forbend
I should be author to dishonour you ! 435
But on mine honour dare I undertake
For good Lord Titus' innocence in all,
Whose fury not dissembled speaks his griefs.
Then, at my suit, look graciously on him ;
Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose. 440
Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.

[Aside to Sat.] My lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last ;

Dissemble all your griefs and discontents.
You are but newly planted in your throne ;
Lest, then, the people, and patricians too, 445
Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,
And so supplant you for ingratitude,
Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin,
Yield at entreats ; and then let me alone :
I'll find a day to massacre them all 450
And raze their faction and their family,
The cruel father and his traitorous sons,
To whom I sued for my dear son's life,
And make them know what 'tis to let a queen
Kneel in the streets and beg for grace in vain.

[Again speaking openly to Sat.]

Come, come, sweet emperor ; — come, Andronicus ; — 456

Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise ; my empress hath prevail'd.

Tit. I thank your Majesty, and her, my lord. 460

These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,

A Roman now adopted happily,

And must advise the Emperor for his good.

This day all quarrels die, Andronicus ; 465

And let it be mine honour, good my lord,

That I have reconcil'd your friends and you.
 For you, Prince Bassianus, I have pass'd
 My word and promise to the Emperor
 That you will be more mild and tractable. 470
 And fear not, lords, and you, Lavinia ;
 By my advice, all humbled on your knees,
 You shall ask pardon of his Majesty.

[Marcus, Lavinia, and the others kneel.]

[Luc.] We do, and vow to heaven and to his Highness,

That what we did was mildly as we might, 475
 Tend'ring our sister's honour and our own.

Marc. That, on mine honour, here do I protest.

Sat. Away, and talk not ; trouble us no more.

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all be friends ;

The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace. 480
 I will not be denied ; sweetheart, look back.

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake and thy brother's here,

And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,
 I do remit these young men's heinous faults.

Stand up ! [Marcus and the others rise.] 485

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,

I found a friend, and sure as death I swore

I would not part a bachelor from the priest.

Come, if the Emperor's court can feast two brides,

You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends. 490

This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your Majesty
To hunt the panther and the hart with me,
With horn and hound we'll give your Grace bon- jour.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too. 495

Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT SECOND

SCENE I

[Rome. Before the palace.]

Enter Aaron.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of fortune's shot ; and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack or lightning flash ;
Advanc'd above pale envy's threat'ning reach.
As when the golden sun salutes the morn, 5
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiac in his glistening coach
And overlooks the highest-peering hills ;
So Tamora :
Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait, 10
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart and fit thy thoughts
To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress,
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph long
Hast prisoner held, fett' red in amorous chains 15
And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.
Away with slavish weeds and servile thoughts
I will be bright and shine in pearl and gold

To wait upon this new-made empress. 20
 To wait, said I? To wanton with this queen,
 This goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph,
 This siren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,
 And see his shipwreck and his commonweal's.
 Holloa! what storm is this? 25

Enter Demetrius and Chiron, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years wants wit, thy wit wants edge
 And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd;
 And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.

Chi. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all;
 And so in this, to bear me down with braves. 30
 'Tis not the difference of a year or two
 Makes me less gracious or thee more fortunate.
 I am as able and as fit as thou
 To serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace;
 And that my sword upon thee shall approve, 35
 And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

Aar. [Aside.] Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvis'd,
 Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side,
 Are you so desperate grown, to threat your friends? 40
 Go to; have your lath glued within your sheath
 Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I have,
Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave? They draw.

Aar. [Coming forward.] Why, how now, lords! 45

So near the Emperor's palace dare you draw,
And maintain such a quarrel openly?

Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge.

I would not for a million of gold

The cause were known to them it most concerns;

Nor would your noble mother for much more 51

Be so dishonoured in the court of Rome.

For shame, put up.

Dem. Not I, till I have sheath'd

My rapier in his bosom, and withal

Thrust those reproachful speeches down his throat 55

That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.

Chi. For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd.

Foul-spoken coward, that thund'rest with thy tongue,

And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform!

Aar. Away, I say! 60

Now, by the gods that warlike Goths adore,

This petty brabble will undo us all.

Why, lords, and think you not how dangerous

It is to jet upon a prince's right?

What, is Lavinia then become so loose, 65

Or Bassianus so degenerate,
 That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd
 Without controlment, justice, or revenge?
 Young lords, beware! an should the Empress know
 This discord's ground, the music would not please. 70

Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world;
 I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner
 choice;
 Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not, in Rome 75
 How furious and impatient they be,
 And cannot brook competitors in love?
 I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
 By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths
 Would I propose to achieve her whom I love. 80

Aar. To achieve her! how?

Dem. Why makes thou it so strange?
 She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;
 She is a woman, therefore may be won;
 She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.
 What, man! more water glideth by the mill 85
 Than wots the miller of; and easy it is
 Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know.

Though Bassianus be the Emperor's brother,
Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge.

Aar. [Aside.] Ay, and as good as Saturninus may. 90

Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to court it

With words, fair looks, and liberality?

What, hast not thou full often struck a doe,

And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose? 94

Aar. Why, then, it seems, some certain snatch or so
Would serve your turns.

Chi. Ay, so the turn were served.

Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Aar. Would you had hit it too!

Then should not we be tir'd with this ado.

Why, hark ye, hark ye! and are you such fools 99

To square for this? Would it offend you, then,

That both should speed?

Chi. Faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me, so I were one.

Aar. For shame, be friends, and join for that you jar.

'Tis policy and stratagem must do

That you affect; and so must you resolve 105

That what you cannot as you would achieve

You must perforce accomplish as you may.

Take this of me: Lucrece was not more chaste

Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.

A speedier course than ling'ring languishment

Must we pursue, and I have found the path. 111

My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand :

There will the lovely Roman ladies troop ;

The forest walks are wide and spacious ;

And many unfrequented plots there are 115

Fitted by kind for rape and villainy.

Single you thither then this dainty doe,

And strike her home by force, if not by words.

This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.

Come, come, our empress, with her sacred wit

To villainy and vengeance consecrate, 121

Will we acquaint with all that we intend ;

And she shall file our engines with advice,

That will not suffer you to square yourselves,

But to your wishes' height advance you both. 125

The Emperor's court is like the house of Fame,

The palace full of tongues, of eyes, and ears ;

The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull ;

There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns ;

There serve your lust, shadowed from heaven's eye, 130

And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.

Dem. Sit fas aut nefas, till I find the stream

To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits, 134

Per Styga, per manes vehor.

Exeunt.

SCENE II

[A forest near Rome.]

Enter Titus Andronicus, and his three sons [Lucius, Quintus, and Martius], making a noise with hounds and horns, and Marcus.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey,
The fields are fragrant and the woods are green.
Uncouple here and let us make a bay,
And wake the Emperor and his lovely bride,
And rouse the Prince, and ring a hunter's peal 5
That all the court may echo with the noise.
Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To attend the Emperor's person carefully.
I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd. 10

A cry of hounds, and horns winded in a peal. Enter Saturninus, Tamora, Bassianus, Lavinia, Chiron, Demetrius, and Attendants.

Many good morrows to your Majesty ;
Madam, to you as many and as good.
I promised your Grace a hunter's peal.

Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lords ;
Somewhat too early for new-married ladies. 15

Bas. Lavinia, how say you ?

- Lav.* I say, no ;
I have been broad awake two hours and more.
- Sat.* Come on, then ; horse and chariots let us have,
And to our sport. [To Tamora.] Madam, now shall ye see
Our Roman hunting.
- Marc.* I have dogs, my lord, 20
Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,
And climb the highest promontory top.
- Tit.* And I have horse will follow where the game
Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.
- Dem.* Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor hound,
But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground. 26

Exeunt.

SCENE III

[A lonely part of the forest.]

Enter Aaron [with a bag of gold].

- Aar.* He that had wit would think that I had none
To bury so much gold under a tree
And never after to inherit it.
Let him that thinks of me so abjectly
Know that this gold must coin a stratagem, 5
Which, cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villainy.
And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest
[Hides the gold.]
That have their alms out of the Empress' chest.

Enter Tamora.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad 10
When everything doth make a gleeful boast?
The birds chant melody on every bush,
The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun,
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind
And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground. 15
Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit,
And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let us sit down and mark their yelping noise; 20
And, after conflict such as was suppos'd
The wand'ring prince and Dido once enjoy'd,
When with a happy storm they were surpris'd
And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,
We may, each wreathed in the other's arms, 25
Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber;
Whiles hounds and horns and sweet melodious birds
Be unto us as is a nurse's song
Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires, 30
Saturn is dominator over mine.
What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
My silence and my cloudy melancholy,
My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls

Even as an adder when she doth unroll 35
To do some fatal execution ?

No, madam, these are no venereal signs.
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul, 40
Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee,

This is the day of doom for Bassianus.
His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day,
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood. 45
Seest thou this letter ? Take it up, I pray thee,
And give the King this fatal-plotted scroll.
Now question me no more ; we are espied.
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction 50

Enter Bassianus and Lavinia.

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life !

Aar. No more, great empress ; Bassianus comes.
Be cross with him ; and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels, whatso'er they be. [Exit.]

Bas. Who have we here ? Rome's royal empress,
Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming troop ? 56
Or is it Dian, habited like her,
Who hath abandoned her holy groves
To see the general hunting in this forest ?

- Tam.* Saucy controller of my private steps ! 60
 Had I the power that some say Dian had,
 Thy temples should be planted presently
 With horns, as was Actæon's ; and the hounds
 Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs,
 Unmannerly intruder as thou art ! 65
- Lav.* Under your patience, gentle empress,
 'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horning ;
 And to be doubted that your Moor and you
 Are singled forth to try experiments.
 Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-day !
 'Tis pity they should take him for a stag. 71
- Bas.* Believe me, Queen, your swarth Cimmerian
 Doth make your honour of his body's hue,
 Spotted, detested, and abominable.
 Why are you sequest' red from all your train, 75
 Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,
 And wand' red hither to an obscure plot,
 Accompanied but with a barbarous Moor,
 If foul desire had not conducted you ?
- Lav.* And, being intercepted in your sport, 80
 Great reason that my noble lord be rated
 For sauciness. I pray you, let us hence,
 And let her joy her raven-coloured love ;
 This valley fits the purpose passing well. 84
- Bas.* The King, my brother, shall have note of this.
- Lav.* Ay, for these slips have made him noted long,
 Good king, to be so mightily abused.

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this ?

Enter Chiron and Demetrius.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother !

Why doth your Highness look so pale and wan ?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale ? 91

These two have 'tic'd me hither to this place ;

A barren detested vale, you see it is ;

The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,

O'ercome with moss and baleful mistletoe. 95

Here never shines the sun ; here nothing breeds,

Unless the nightly owl or fatal raven ;

And when they show'd me this abhorred pit,

They told me, here, at dead time of the night,

A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes, 100

Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,

Would make such fearful and confused cries

As any mortal body hearing it

Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.

No sooner had they told this hellish tale, 105

But straight they told me they would bind me here

Unto the body of a dismal yew,

And leave me to this miserable death.

And then they call'd me foul adulteress,

Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms 110

That ever ear did hear to such effect ;

And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,

This vengeance on me had they executed.
 Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
 Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children. 115

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

Stabs Bassianus.

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show my strength.

[Also stabs Bassianus, who dies.]

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis, nay, barbarous Tamora,
 For no name fits thy nature but thy own! 119

Tam. Give me thy poniard; you shall know, my boys,
 Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.

Dem. ~~Stay, madam; here is more belongs to her.~~
 First thrash the corn, then after burn the straw.
 This minion stood upon her chastity,
 Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty, 125
 And with that painted hope braves your mighti-
 ness;

And shall she carry this unto her grave?

Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.
 Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
 And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust. 130

Tam. But when ye have the honey ye desire, Let not this wasp outlive us both to sting. Be with

Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.
 Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy
 That nice-preserved honesty of yours. 135

Lav. O Tamora! thou bear'st a woman's face, —

Tam. I will not hear her speak ; away with her !

Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam : let it be your glory
To see her tears ; but be your heart to them 140
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam ?
O, do not learn her wrath ; she taught it thee ;
The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to marble ;
Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny. 145
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike,
[To Chiron.] Do thou entreat her show a woman's pity.

Chi. What, wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard ?

Lav. 'Tis true ; the raven doth not hatch a lark.
Yet have I heard, — O, could I find it now ! — 150
The lion mov'd with pity did endure
To have his princely paws par'd all away ;
Some say that ravens foster forlorn children
The whilst their own birds famish in their nests ;
O, be to me, though thy hard heart say no, 155
Nothing so kind, but something pitiful !

Tam. I know not what it means ; away with her !

Lav. O, let me teach thee ! For my father's sake,
That gave thee life when well he might have slain
thee,
Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears. 160

Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me,
 Even for his sake am I pitiless.
 Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain
 To save your brother from the sacrifice ;
 But fierce Andronicus would not relent. 165
 Therefore, away with her, and use her as you will,

The worse to her, the better lov'd of me.

Lav. O Tamora, be call'd a gentle queen,
 And with thine own hands kill me in this place !
 For 'tis not life that I have begg'd so long ; 170
 Poor I was slain when Bassianus died.

Tam. What begg'st thou, then ? Fond woman, let me go.

Lav. 'Tis present death I beg, and one thing more
 That womanhood denies my tongue to tell.
 O, keep me from their worse than killing lust, 175
 And tumble me into some loathsome pit
 Where never man's eye may behold my body.
 Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee.
 No, let them satisfy their lust on thee. pitiless 180

Dem. Away ! for thou hast stay'd us here too long.

Lav. No grace ? no womanhood ? Ah, beastly creature !

The blot and enemy to our general name !
 Confusion fall —

Chi. Nay, then I'll stop your mouth. Bring thou her husband ; 185

This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.

[Demetrius throws the body of Bassianus into the pit; then exeunt Demetrius and Chiron, dragging off Lavinia.]

Tam. Farewell, my sons : see that you make her sure.
 Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed,
 Till all the Andronici be made away.
 Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor, 190
 And let my spleenful sons this trull deflower.

Exit.

Re-enter Aaron, with Quintus and Martius.

Aar. Come on, my lords, the better foot before.
 Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit
 Where I espied the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes. 195

Mart. And mine, I promise you ; were't not for shame, Well could I leave our sport to sleep a while.

[Falls into the pit.]

Quin. What, art thou fallen ? What subtle hole is this,
 Whose mouth is covered with rude-growing briars,
 Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood
 As fresh as morning dew distill'd on flowers ? 201
 A very fatal place it seems to me.

Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall ?

Mart. O brother, with the dismall'st object hurt
That ever eye with sight made heart lament ! 205

Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the King to find them here,

That he thereby may have a likely guess
How these were they that made away his brother.
Exit.

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out
From this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole ? 210

Quin. I am surprised with an uncouth fear ;
A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints ;
My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.

Mart. To prove thou hast a true-divining heart,
Aaron and thou look down into this den, 215
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.

Quin. Aaron is gone ; and my compassionate heart
Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise.
O, tell me who it is ; for ne'er till now 220
Was I a child to fear I know not what.

Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrued here,
All on a heap, like to a slaught' red lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he ? 225

Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring, that lightens all this hole,
Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks

And shows the ragged entrails of this pit. 230

So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus

When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.

O brother, help me with thy fainting hand —

If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath —

Out of this fell devouring receptacle, 235

As hateful as Cocytus' misty mouth.

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out ;

Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,

I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb

Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave. 240

I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.

Quin. Thy hand once more ; I will not loose again

Till thou art here aloft or I below.

Thou canst not come to me ; I come to thee. 245

Falls in.

Enter Saturninus with Aaron.

Sat. Along with me ; I'll see what hole is here,

And what he is that now is leap'd into it.

Say, who art thou that lately didst descend

Into this gaping hollow of the earth ?

Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus, 250

Brought hither in a most unlucky hour

To find thy brother Bassianus dead.

Sat. My brother dead ! I know thou dost but jest.

He and his lady both are at the lodge

Upon the north side of this pleasant chase ; 255
 'Tis not an hour since I left them there.

Mart. We know not where you left them all alive ;
 But, out, alas ! here have we found him dead.

Re-enter Tamora [with Attendants], Titus Andronicus, and Lucius.

Tam. Where is my lord the King ?

Sat. Here, Tamora, though griev'd with killing grief.

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus ? 261

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound ;
 Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ,
 The complot of this timeless tragedy ; 265
 And wonder greatly that man's face can fold
 In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

She giveth Saturnine a letter.

Sat. (Reads.) "An if we miss to meet him handsomely —

Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis we mean —
 Do thou so much as dig the grave for him. 270
 Thou know'st our meaning. Look for thy reward
 Among the nettles at the elder-tree
 Which overshades the mouth of that same pit
 Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.
 Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends." 275
 O Tamora ! was ever heard the like ?
 This is the pit, and this the elder-tree.

Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out
That should have murdered Bassianus here.

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold. 280

Sat. [To Titus.] Two of thy whelps, fell curs of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life.

Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison.

There let them bide until we have devis'd

Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them. 285

Tam. What, are they in this pit? O wondrous thing!
How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee

I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed,

That this fell fault of my accursed sons, 290

Accursed, if the fault be prov'd in them, —

Sat. If it be prov'd! You see it is apparent.

Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord; yet let me be their bail, 295

For, by my father's reverend tomb, I vow

They shall be ready at your Highness' will

To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them; see thou follow me.

Some bring the murdered body, some the murderers. 300

Let them not speak a word; the guilt is plain;

For, by my soul, were there worse end than death,

That end upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the King.

Fear not thy sons ; they shall do well enough. 305

Tit. Come, Lucius, come ; stay not to talk with them.

Exeunt.

SCENE IV

[Another part of the forest.]

Enter Demetrius and Chiron, with Lavinia, ravished ; her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak,
Who 'twas that cut thy tongue and ravish'd thee.

Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so,
An if thy stumps will let thee play the scribe.

Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can scrawl. 5

Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.

Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash ;
And so let's leave her to her silent walks.

Chi. An 'twere my case, I should go hang myself. 9

Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord.

Exeunt Demetrius and Chiron.

Horns winded. Enter Marcus from hunting.

Mar. Who is this — my niece ? — that flies away so fast ?

Cousin, a word ; where is your husband ?

If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me !

If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
That I may slumber in eternal sleep ! 15
Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands
Hath lopp'd and hew'd and made thy body bare
Of her two branches, those sweet ornaments
Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in,
And might not gain so great a happiness 20
As have thy love ? Why dost not speak to me ?
Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,
Coming and going with thy honey breath. 25
But, sure, some Tereus hath deflowered thee,
And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy tongue.
Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame !
And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood
As from a conduit with three issuing spouts, 30
Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face
Blushing to be encount'ed with a cloud.
Shall I speak for thee ? Shall I say 'tis so ?
O, that I knew thy heart ; and knew the beast,
That I might rail at him to ease my mind ! 35
Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd,
Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.
Fair Philomela, why, she but lost her tongue,
And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind ;
But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee ; 40

A craftier Tereus, cousin, hast thou met,
And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,
That could have better sew'd than Philomel.
O, had the monster seen those lily hands
Tremble, like aspen-leaves, upon a lute, 45
And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,
He would not then have touch'd them for his life !
Or, had he heard the heavenly harmony
Which that sweet tongue hath made,
He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep
As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet. 51
Come, let us go, and make thy father blind ;
For such a sight will blind a father's eye.
One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads ;
What will whole months of tears thy father's eyes ? 55
Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee.
O, could our mourning ease thy misery !

Exeunt.

ACT THIRD

[Rome. A street.]

Enter Judges, Senators [and Tribunes], with Martius and Quintus, bound, passing on the stage to the place of execution; Titus going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!
For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept;
For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed;
For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd; 5
And for these bitter tears, which now you see
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks;
Be pitiful to my condemned sons,
Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought.
For two and twenty sons I never wept, 10
Because they died in honour's lofty bed.

*Lieth down; the Judges, etc., pass by him
[and exeunt].*

For these, tribunes, in the dust I write
My heart's deep languor and my soul's sad tears.
Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite;
My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.
O earth, I will befriend thee more with rain, 16

That shall distil from these two ancient urns,
 Than youthful April shall with all his showers.
 In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still ;
 In winter with warm tears I'll melt the snow 20
 And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,
 So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter Lucius, with his weapon drawn.

O reverend tribunes ! O gentle, aged men !
 Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death ;
 And let me say, that never wept before, 25
 My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O noble father, you lament in vain.

The tribunes hear you not ; no man is by ;
 And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead. 30
 Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you, —

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man ; if they did hear,
 They would not mark me, or if they did mark,
 They would not pity me ; yet plead I must, 35
 And bootless unto them.

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones ;

Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
 Yet in some sort they are better than the tribunes,
 For that they will not intercept my tale. 40

When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
 Receive my tears and seem to weep with me ;

And, were they but attired in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no tribune like to these.

A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones ; 45

A stone is silent, and offendeth not,
And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death. [Rises.]

But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn ?

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death ;
For which attempt the judges have pronounc'd 50
My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man ! they have befriended thee.
Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers ?
Tigers must prey, and Rome affords no prey 55
But me and mine. How happy art thou, then,
From these devourers to be banished !
But who comes with our brother Marcus here ?

Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Marc. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep ;
Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break. 60
I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me ? Let me see it, then.

Marc. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.

Luc. Ay me, this object kills me !

- Tit.* Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her. 65
Speak, Lavinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?
What fool hath added water to the sea,
Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy?
My grief was at the height before thou cam'st, 70
And now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds.
Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too;
For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain;
And they have nurs'd this woe, in feeding life;
In bootless prayer have they been held up, 75
And they have serv'd me to effectless use.
Now all the service I require of them
Is that the one will help to cut the other.
'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands;
For hands to do Rome service is but vain. 80
- Luc.* Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee?
- Marc.* O, that delightful engine of her thoughts,
That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence,
Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,
Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung 85
Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear!
- Luc.* O, say thou for her, who hath done this deed?
- Marc.* O, thus I found her, straying in the park,
Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer
That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound. 90
- Tit.* It was my deer; and he that wounded her
Hath hurt me more than had he kill'd me dead.

For now I stand as one upon a rock
 Environ'd with a wilderness of sea,
 Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,
 Expecting ever when some envious surge 96
 Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.

This way to death my wretched sons are gone,
 Here stands my other son, a banish'd man,
 And here my brother, weeping at my woes ; 100
 But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn,
 Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.

Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,
 It would have maddened me ; what shall I do
 Now I behold thy lively body so ? 105

Thou hast no hands, to wipe away thy tears ;
 Nor tongue, to tell me who hath martyr'd thee.
 Thy husband he is dead ; and for his death
 Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.
 Look, Marcus ! ah, son Lucius, look on her ! 110

When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears
 Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey-dew
 Upon a gath'red lily almost withered.

Marc. Perchance she weeps because they kill'd her husband ;

Perchance because she knows them innocent. 115

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,
 Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.
 No, no, they would not do so foul a deed ;
 Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.

Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips, 120
Or make some sign how I may do thee ease.
Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain,
Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks
How they are stain'd, like meadows yet not dry 125
With miry slime left on them by a flood?
And in the fountain shall we gaze so long
Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,
And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?
Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine? 130
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows
Pass the remainder of our hateful days?
What shall we do? Let us that have our tongues
Plot some device of further misery,
To make us wond' red at in time to come. 135

Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for, at your grief,
See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.

Marc. Patience, dear niece. Good Titus, dry thine eyes.

Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I wot
Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine, 140
For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.

Luc. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.

Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs.
Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee: 145
His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,

Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
 O, what a sympathy of woe is this,
 As far from help as Limbo is from bliss !

Enter Aaron the Moor.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the Emperor 150
 Sends thee this word, — that, if thou love thy sons,
 Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
 Or any one of you, chop off your hand
 And send it to the King ; he for the same
 Will send thee hither both thy sons alive ; 155
 And that shall be the ransom for their fault.

Tit. O gracious emperor ! O gentle Aaron !
 Did ever raven sing so like a lark
 That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprising ?
 With all my heart, I'll send the Emperor 160
 My hand.

Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off ?

Luc. Stay, father ! for that noble hand of thine,
 That hath thrown down so many enemies, 164
 Shall not be sent. My hand will serve the turn.
 My youth can better spare my blood than you ;
 And therefore mine shall save my brothers' lives.

Marc. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome,
 And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
 Writing destruction on the enemy's castle ? 170
 O, none of both but are of high desert.
 My hand hath been but idle ; let it serve

To ransom my two nephews from their death ;
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go along, 175
For fear they die before their pardon come.

Marc. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven, it shall not go !

Tit. Sirs, strive no more : such with' red herbs as these Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son, 180
Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Marc. And, for our father's sake and mother's care,
Now let me show a brother's love to thee.

Tit. Agree between you ; I will spare my hand.

Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe. 185

Marc. But I will use the axe.

Exeunt [Lucius and Marcus].

Tit. Come hither, Aaron ; I'll deceive them both.
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. [Aside.] If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,
And never, whilst I live, deceive men so ; 190
But I'll deceive you in another sort,
And that you'll say, ere half an hour pass.

Cuts off Titus's hand.

Re-enter Lucius and Marcus.

Tit. Now stay your strife ; what shall be is dispatch'd.
Good Aaron, give his Majesty my hand.
Tell him it was a hand that warded him 195

When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'er-flow ?

If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swoln face ?
And wilt thou have a reason for this coil ? 225

I am the sea ; hark, how her sighs do blow !
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth ;
Then must my sea be moved with her sighs ;
Then must my earth with her continual tears
Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd ; 230
For why my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them.
Then give me leave, for losers will have leave
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger, with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid 235
For that good hand thou sent'st the Emperor.
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons ;
And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent back,
Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd,
That woe is me to think upon thy woes 240
More than remembrance of my father's death.

Exit.

Marc. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily,
And be my heart an ever-burning hell !
These miseries are more than may be borne.

To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal,
But sorrow flouted at is double death. 246

Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so deep a wound,
And yet detested life not shrink thereat !
That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe !

[Lavinia kisses Titus.]

Marc. Alas, poor heart, that kiss is comfortless 251
As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end ?

Marc. Now, farewell, flattery ; die, Andronicus.
Thou dost not slumber ; see, thy two sons' heads, 255

Thy warlike hand, thy mangled daughter here,
Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight
Struck pale and bloodless ; and thy brother, I,
Even like a stony image, cold and numb.

Ah, now no more will I control thy griefs. 260

Rend off thy silver hair, thy other hand
Gnawing with thy teeth ; and be this dismal sight
The closing up of our most wretched eyes.

Now is a time to storm ; why art thou still ?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha ! 265

Marc. Why dost thou laugh ? It fits not with this hour.

Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed.
Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my watery eyes

And make them blind with tributary tears ; 270
Then which way shall I find Revenge's cave ?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me,
And threat me I shall never come to bliss
Till all these mischiefs be return'd again
Even in their throats that have committed them.
Come, let me see what task I have to do. 276
You heavy people, circle me about,
That I may turn me to each one of you
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.
The vow is made. Come, brother, take a head ;
And in this hand the other will I bear. 281
Lavinia, thou shalt be employed in these things !
Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.

As for thee, boy, go, get thee from my sight ;
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay. 285
Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there ;
And, if you love me, as I think you do,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

Exeunt [Titus, Marcus, and Lavinia].

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father,
The woeful'st man that ever liv'd in Rome. 290
Farewell, proud Rome ; till Lucius come again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.
Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister ;
O, would thou wert as thou tofore hast been !
But now nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives 295

But in oblivion and hateful griefs.

If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs ;
 And make proud Saturnine and his empress
 Beg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.
 Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power, 300
 To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine.

Exit.

SCENE II

[A room in Titus's house. A banquet set out.] Enter Titus, Marcus, Lavinia, and young Lucius.

Tit. So, so ; now sit ; and look you eat no more
 Than will preserve just so much strength in us
 As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
 Marcus, unknit that sorrow-wreathen knot ;
 Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands,
 And cannot passionate our tenfold grief 6
 With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine
 Is left to tyrannize upon my breast ;
 Who, when my heart, all mad with misery,
 Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh, 10
 Then thus I thump it down.

[To Lavinia.] Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs !

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating,

Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.

Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans ; 15

Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole,
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall
May run into that sink, and soaking in Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears. 20

Marc. Fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands upon her tender life.

Tit. How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?
Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.
What violent hands can she lay on her life? 25
Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands,
To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er,
How Troy was burnt and he made miserable?
O, handle not the theme, to talk of hands
Lest we remember still that we have none. 30
Fie, fie, how frantically I square my talk,
As if we should forget we had no hands
If Marcus did not name the word of hands!
Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this.
Here is no drink! Hark, Marcus, what she says;
I can interpret all her martyr'd signs: 36
She says she drinks no other drink but tears
Brew'd with her sorrow, mash'd upon her cheeks.
Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect 40
As begging hermits in their holy prayers.
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to heaven,

Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
But I of these will wrest an alphabet

And by still practice learn to know thy meaning. 45

Young Luc. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments.

Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

Marc. Alas, the tender boy, in passion mov'd,
Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.

Tit. Peace, tender sapling ; thou art made of tears, 50
And tears will quickly melt thy life away.

Marcus strikes the dish with a knife.

What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife ?

Marc. At that I have kill'd, my lord ; a fly.

Tit. Out on thee, murderer ! thou kill'st my heart ;
Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny. 55

A deed of death done on the innocent
Becomes not Titus' brother. Get thee gone ;
I see thou art not for my company.

Marc. Alas, my lord, I have but kill'd a fly. 59

Tit. "But !" How, if that fly had a father and mother ?
How would he hang his slender gilded wings,

And buzz lamenting doings in the air !

Poor harmless fly,

That, with his pretty buzzing melody,

Came here to make us merry ! and thou hast kill'd
him. 65

Marc. Pardon me, sir, it was a black ill-favour'd fly,
Like to the Empress' Moor ; therefore I kill'd him.

Tit. O, O, O,

Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a charitable deed. 70

Give me thy knife, I will insult on him ;
Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor

Come hither purposely to poison me. —
There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora.

Ah, sirrah ! 75

Yet, I think, we are not brought so low,
But that between us we can kill a fly
That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.

Marc. Alas, poor man ! grief has so wrought on him,
He takes false shadows for true substances. 80

Tit. Come, take away. Lavinia, go with me.

I'll to thy closet, and go read with thee
Sad stories chanced in the times of old.

Come, boy, and go with me ; thy sight is young,
And thou shalt read when mine begin to dazzle.

Exeunt.

ACT FOURTH

[Rome. Titus's garden.]

Enter young Lucius, and Lavinia running after him, and the boy flies from her, with his books under his arm. Then enter Titus and Marcus.

Young Luc. Help, grandsire, help ! my aunt Lavinia
Follows me everywhere, I know not why.

Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes.

Alas, sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.

Marc. Stand by me, Lucius ; do not fear thine aunt.

Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee harm. 6

Young Luc. Ay, when my father was in Rome she did.

Marc. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs ?

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius ; somewhat doth she mean.

[Marc.] See, Lucius, see how much she makes of thee ;
Somewhither would she have thee go with her. 11

Ah, boy, Cornelia never with more care

Read to her sons than she hath read to thee

Sweet poetry and Tully's Orator.

Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus ?

Young Luc. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess, 16

Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her ;

For I have heard my grandsire say full oft

Extremity of griefs would make men mad,
 And I have read that Hecuba of Troy 20
 Ran mad for sorrow. That made me to fear;
 Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt
 Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did,
 And would not, but in fury, fright my youth;
 Which made me down to throw my books, and fly, — 25
 Causeless, perhaps. But pardon me, sweet aunt;
 And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,
 I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Marc. Lucius, I will.

[Lavinia turns over with her stumps the books which Lucius has let fall.]

Tit. How now, Lavinia! Marcus, what means this? 30
 Some book there is that she desires to see.
 Which is it, girl, of these? Open them, boy.
 But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd;
 Come, and take choice of all my library,
 And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens 35
 Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed.
 Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?

Marc. I think she means that there were more than one Confederate in the fact. Ay, more there was;
 Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge. 40

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so?

Young Luc. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphoses;
 My mother gave it me.

Marc. For love of her that's gone,
Perhaps she cull'd it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! so busily she turns the leaves! Help her. 45
What would she find? Lavinia, shall I read?
This is the tragic tale of Philomel,
And treats of Tereus' treason and his rape;
And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.

Marc. See, brother, see; note how she quotes the leaves. 50

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl, Ravish'd and wrong'd, as Philomela was,
Forc'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?
See, see!
Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt — 55
O, had we never, never hunted there! —
Pattern'd by that the poet here describes,
By nature made for murders and for rapes.

Marc. O, why should nature build so foul a den,
Unless the gods delight in tragedies? 60

Tit. Give signs, sweet girl, for here are none but friends,
What Roman lord it was durst do the deed;
Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,
That left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed?

Marc. Sit down, sweet niece; brother, sit down by
me. 65

Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,
Inspire me, that I may this treason find!

My lord, look here ; look here, Lavinia.

*He writes his name with his staff, and guides
it with feet and mouth.*

This sandy plot is plain ; guide, if thou canst,
This after me. I have writ my name 70
Without the help of any hand at all.

Curs'd be that heart that forc'd us to this shift !
Write thou, good niece ; and here display at last
What God will have discovered for revenge.
Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain,
That we may know the traitors and the truth ! 76

She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps, and writes.

Tit. O, do ye read, my lord, what she hath writ ?
“Stuprum — Chiron — Demetrius.”

Marc. What, what ! the lustful sons of Tamora
Performers of this heinous, bloody deed ? 80

Tit. *Magni Dominator poli,
Tam lentus audis scelera? tam lentus vides?*

Marc. O, calm thee, gentle lord ; although I know
There is enough written upon this earth
To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts, 85
And arm the minds of infants to exclaims.
My lord, kneel down with me ; Lavinia, kneel ;
And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope ;
And swear with me, as, with the woeful fere
And father of that chaste dishonoured dame, 90
Lord Junius Brutus sware for Lucrece' rape,

That we will prosecute by good advice
Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths,
And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

Tit. 'Tis sure enough, an you knew how. 95

But if you hunt these bear-whelps, then beware !
The dam will wake ; and, if she wind you once,
She's with the lion deeply still in league,
And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back,
And when he sleeps will she do what she list. 100
You are a young huntsman, Marcus ; let alone ;
And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,
And with a gad of steel will write these words,
And lay it by. The angry northern wind
Will blow these sands, like Sibyl's leaves, abroad,
And where's our lesson, then ? Boy, what say you ? 106

Young Luc. I say, my lord, that if I were a man,
Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe
For these base bondmen to the yoke of Rome.

Marc. Ay, that's my boy ! Thy father hath full oft
For his ungrateful country done the like. 111

Young Luc. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.

Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury ;
Lucius, I'll fit thee ; and withal, my boy
Shall carry from me to the Empress' sons 115
Presents that I intend to send them both.
Come, come ; thou'lt do my message, wilt thou not ?

Young Luc. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grand-sire.

Tit. No, boy, not so ; I'll teach thee another course.
Lavinia, come. Marcus, look to my house ; 120
Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court.
Ay, marry, will we, sir ; and we'll be waited on.

Exeunt [Titus, Lavinia, and young Lucius].

Marc. O heavens, can you hear a good man groan
And not relent or not compassion him ?
Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy, 125
That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart
Than foemen's marks upon his batt' red shield ;
But yet so just that he will not revenge.
Revenge the heavens for old Andronicus ! Exit.

SCENE II

[The same. A room in the palace.]

Enter Aaron, Demetrius, and Chiron, at one door ; and at another door, young Lucius, and another, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius ;
He hath some message to deliver us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Young Luc. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,
I greet your honours from Andronicus. 5

[Aside.] And pray the Roman gods confound you both !

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius. What's the news?

Young Luc. [Aside.] That you are both decipher'd,
that's the news,

For villains mark'd with rape. — May it please you,

My grandsire, well advis'd, hath sent by me 10

The goodliest weapons of his armoury

To gratify your honourable youth,

The hope of Rome; for so he bid me say;

And so I do, and with his gifts present

Your lordships, that, whenever you have need, 15

You may be armed and appointed well:

And so I leave you both — [Aside] like bloody villains.

Exeunt [young Lucius and Attendant].

Dem. What's here? A scroll; and written round about.

Let's see:

[Reads.] "Integer vitæ, scelerisque purus, 20

Non eget Mauri jaculis, nec arcu."

Chi. O, 'tis a verse in Horace; I know it well.

I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay, just; a verse in Horace; right, you have it.

[Aside.] Now, what a thing it is to be an ass! 25

Here's no sound jest! The old man hath found their guilt;

And sends them weapons wrapp'd about with lines

That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick.

But were our witty empress well afoot,

She would applaud Andronicus' conceit ; 30

But let her rest in her unrest a while. —

And now, young lords, was't not a happy star
Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than so,
Captives, to be advanced to this height ?

It did me good, before the palace gate 35

To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing.

Dem. But me more good to see so great a lord

Basely insinuate and send us gifts.

Aar. Had he not reason, Lord Demetrius ?

Did you not use his daughter very friendly ? 40

Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman dames

At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say amen.

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more. 45

Dem. Come, let us go and pray to all the gods

For our beloved mother in her pains.

Aar. [Aside.] Pray to the devils ; the gods have given us over. Trumpets sound within.

Dem. Why do the Emperor's trumpets flourish thus ?

Chi. Belike, for joy the Emperor hath a son. 50

Dem. Soft ! who comes here ?

Enter a Nurse, with a blackamoor Child.

Nur. Good morrow, lords.

O, tell me, did you see Aaron the Moor ?

- Aar.* Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at all,
Here Aaron is ; and what with Aaron now ?
- Nur.* O gentle Aaron, we are all undone ! 55
Now help, or woe betide thee evermore !
- Aar.* Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep !
What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms ?
- Nur.* O, that which I would hide from heaven's eye,
Our empress' shame, and stately Rome's disgrace !
She is delivered, lords ; she is delivered. 61
- Aar.* To whom ?
- Nur.* I mean, she is brought a-bed.
- Aar.* Well, God give her good rest ! What hath he sent her ?
- Nur.* A devil.
- Aar.* Why, then she is the devil's dam ; a joyful issue. 65
- Nur.* A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful issue !
Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad
Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime.
The Empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,
And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point.
- Aar.* 'Zounds, ye whore ! is black so base a hue ? 71
Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossom, sure.
- Dem.* Villain, what hast thou done ?
- Aar.* That which thou canst not undo.
- Chi.* Thou hast undone our mother. 75
- Aar.* Villain, I have done thy mother.
- Dem.* And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone her.

Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choice !
Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend !

Chi. It shall not live. 80

Aar. It shall not die.

Nur. Aaron, it must ; the mother wills it so.

Aar. What, must it, nurse ? then let no man but I
Do execution on my flesh and blood.

Dem. I'll broach the tadpole on my rapier's point. 85
Nurse, give it me ; my sword shall soon dispatch it.

Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up.

[Takes the Child from the Nurse, and draws.]

Stay, murderous villains ! will you kill your brother ?

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,
That shone so brightly when this boy was got, 90

He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point

That touches this my first-born son and heir !

I tell you, younglings, not Encecladus

With all his threat'ning band of Typhon's brood,

Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war, 95

Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.

What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys !

Ye white-lim'd walls ! ye alchouse painted signs !

Coal-black is better than another hue,

In that it scorns to bear another hue ; 100

For all the water in the ocean

Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,

Although she lave them hourly in the flood.

Tell the Empress from me, I am of age
To keep mine own, excuse it how she can. 105

Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress thus?

Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this myself,
The vigour and the picture of my youth.
This before all the world do I prefer;
This maugre all the world will I keep safe, 110
Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.

Dem. By this our mother is for ever sham'd.

Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.

Nur. The Emperor, in his rage, will doom her death.

Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy. 115

Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears.

Fie, treacherous hue, that will betray with blushing
The close enacts and counsels of thy heart!

Here's a young lad fram'd of another leer;

Look, how the black slave smiles upon the father,
As who should say, "Old lad, I am thine own." 121

He is your brother, lords, sensibly fed

Of that self-blood that first gave life to you,

And from that womb where you imprisoned were
He is enfranchised and come to light. 125

Nay, he is your brother by the surer side,

Although my seal be stamped in his face.

Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the Empress?

Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all subscribe to thy advice. 130
Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.

Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.
 My son and I will have the wind of you ;
 Keep there. Now talk at pleasure of your safety.
[They sit.]

Dem. How many women saw this child of his ? 135

Aar. Why, so, brave lords ! when we join in league,
 I am a lamb ; but if you brave the Moor,
 The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,
 The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms.
 But say, again, how many saw the child ? 140

Nur. Cornelia the midwife and myself ;
 And no one else but the delivered empress.

Aar. The Empress, the midwife, and yourself.
 Two may keep counsel when the third's away.
 Go to the Empress, tell her this I said. 145
He kills her.

Weke, weke ! so cries a pig prepared to the spit.

Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron ? wherefore didst thou this ?

Aar. O Lord, sir, 'tis a deed of policy.
 Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours,
 A long-tongu'd babbling gossip ? No, lords, no ;
 And now be it known to you my full intent. 151
 Not far, one Muli lives, my countryman ;
 His wife but yesternight was brought to bed ;
 His child is like to her, fair as you are.
 Go pack with him, and give the mother gold, 155
 And tell them both the circumstance of all ;

And how by this their child shall be advanc'd,
 And be received for the Emperor's heir,
 And substituted in the place of mine
 To calm this tempest whirling in the court ; 160
 And let the Emperor dandle him for his own.
 Hark ye, lords ; you see I have given her physic,
[Pointing to the Nurse.]

And you must needs bestow her funeral ;
 The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms.
 This done, see that you take no longer days, 165
 But send the midwife presently to me.
 The midwife and the nurse well made away,
 Then let the ladies tattle what they please.

Chi. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air
 With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora, 170
 Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.

Exeunt [Dem. and Chi., bearing off the Nurse's body].

Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow flies ;
 There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,
 And secretly to greet the Empress' friends.
 Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you hence ; 175
 For it is you that puts us to our shifts.
 I'll make you feed on berries and on roots,
 And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat,

And cabin in a cave, and bring you up 179
To be a warrior, and command a camp. Exit.

SCENE III

[The same. A public place.]

Enter Titus, bearing arrows with letters at the ends of them: with him, Marcus, young Lucius, [Publius, Sempronius, Caius] and other Gentlemen, with bows.

Tit. Come, Marcus, come ; kinsmen, this is the way.
Sir boy, let me see your archery.
Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straight.
Terras Astræa reliquit ;
Be you rememb' red, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled.
Sirs, take you to your tools. You, cousins, shall 6
Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets ;
Happily you may catch her in the sea ;
Yet there's as little justice as at land.
No ; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it ; 10
'Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade,
And pierce the inmost centre of the earth ;
Then, when you come to Pluto's region,
I pray you, deliver him this petition.
Tell him, it is for Justice and for aid, 15
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.

Ah, Rome! Well, well; I made thee miserable
What time I threw the people's suffrages
On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me. 20
Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,
And leave you not a man-of-war unsearch'd.
This wicked emperor may have shipp'd her hence;
And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for Justice.

Marc. O Publius, is not this a heavy case, 25
To see thy noble uncle thus distract?

Pub. Therefore, my lords, it highly us concerns
By day and night to attend him carefully,
And feed his humour kindly as we may,
Till time beget some careful remedy. 30

Marc. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.
Join with the Goths; and with revengeful war
Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius, how now! how now, my masters! 35
What, have you met with her?

Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you word,
If you will have Revenge from hell, you shall.
Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd,
He thinks, with Jove in heaven, or somewhere else,
So that perforce you must needs stay a time. 41

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delays.
I'll dive into the burning lake below,
And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.
Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we, 45

No big-bon'd men fram'd of the Cyclops' size ;
 But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back,
 Yet wrung with wrongs more than our backs can bear.

And, sith there's no justice in earth nor hell,
 We will solicit heaven and move the gods 50
 To send down Justice for to wreak our wrongs.

Come, to this gear. You are a good archer, Marcus ; He gives them the arrows.
 "Ad Jovem," that's for you ; here, "Ad Apollinem ;"

"Ad Martem," that's for myself ;
 Here, boy, to Pallas ; here, to Mercury ; 55
 To Saturn, Caius, not to Saturnine,
 You were as good to shoot against the wind.
 To it, boy ! Marcus, loose when I bid.
 Of my word, I have written to effect ;
 There's not a god left unsolicited. 60

Marc. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the court ;
 We will afflict the Emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O, well said, Lucius !

Good boy, in Virgo's lap ; give it Pallas.

Marc. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the moon ; 65
 Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Ha, ha !

Publius, Publius, what hast thou done ?

See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.

Marc. This was the sport, my lord. When Publius shot, 70

The Bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock
That down fell both the Ram's horns in the court ;
And who should find them but the Empress' villain ?

She laugh'd, and told the Moor he should not choose

But give them to his master for a present. 75

Tit. Why, there it goes ; God give his lordship joy !

Enter a Clown, with a basket, and two pigeons in it.

News, news from heaven ! Marcus, the post is come.

Sirrah, what tidings ? Have you any letters ?
Shall I have justice ? What says Jupiter ?

Clo. O, the gibbet-maker ! he says that he hath 80 taken them down again, for the man must not be hang'd till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee ?

Clo. Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter ; I never drank with him in all my life. 85

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier ?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir ; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven ?

Clo. From heaven ! alas, sir, I never came there.
God forbid I should be so bold to press to 90 heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the emperial's men.

Marc. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be to serve 95 for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the Emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the Emperor with a grace?

Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all 100 my life.

Tit. Sirrah, come hither; make no more ado,
But give your pigeons to the Emperor.
By me thou shalt have justice at his hands.
Hold, hold; meanwhile here's money for thy charges. 105

Give me pen and ink. Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?

Clo. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach you 110 must kneel, then kiss his foot, then deliver up your pigeons, and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, sir, let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me see it. 115
Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration;
For thou hast made it like an humble suppliant.

And when thou hast given it the Emperor,
Knock at my door, and tell me what he says.

Clo. God be with you, sir ; I will. Exit. 120

Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go. Publius, follow me.
Exeunt.

SCENE IV

[The same. Before the palace.]

Enter Saturninus, Tamora, Demetrius, Chiron [Lords, and others]; Saturninus brings the arrows in his hand that Titus shot at him.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these ! Was ever seen

An emperor in Rome thus overborne,
Troubled, confronted thus ; and, for the extent
Of egal justice, us'd in such contempt ?
My lords, you know, [as know] the mightful gods, 5
However these disturbers of our peace
Buzz in the people's ears, there nought hath pass'd,
But even with law, against the wilful sons
Of old Andronicus. And what an if
His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits, 10
Shall we be thus afflicted in his wrecks,
His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness ?
And now he writes to heaven for his redress.
See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury ;
This to Apollo ; this to the god of war ; 15

Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome !

What's this but libelling against the senate,

And blazoning our injustice everywhere ?

A goodly humour, is it not, my lords ?

As who would say, in Rome no justice were. 20

But if I live, his feigned ecstasies

Shall be no shelter to these outrages ;

But he and his shall know that justice lives

In Saturninus' health, whom, if he sleep,

He'll so awake as he in fury shall 25

Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives.

Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine,

Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts,

Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,

The effects of sorrow for his valiant sons, 30

Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep and scarr'd his heart ;

And rather comfort his distressed plight

Than prosecute the meanest or the best

For these contempts. (Aside.) Why, thus it shall become

High-witted Tamora to gloze with all ; 35

But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick.

Thy life-blood out, if Aaron now be wise,

Then is all safe, the anchor in the port.

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow ! wouldst thou speak with us ?

Clo. Yea, forsooth, an your mistership be emperial. 40

Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the Emperor.

Clo. 'Tis he. God and Saint Stephen give you god-den. I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeons here.

Saturninus reads the letter.

Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him presently. 45

Clo. How much money must I have ?

Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hang'd.

Clo. Hang'd ! by'r lady, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end. Exit [guarded].

Sat. Despiteful and intolerable wrongs ! 50

Shall I endure this monstrous villainy ?

I know from whence this same device proceeds.

May this be borne ? As if his traitorous sons,

That died by law for murder of our brother,

Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully !

Go, drag the villain hither by the hair ; 56

Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege.

For this proud mock I'll be thy slaughter-man ;

Sly frantic wretch, that holp'st to make me great,

In hope thyself should govern Rome and me. 60

Enter Nuntius Æmilius.

What news with thee, Æmilius ?

Æmil. Arm, my lords ! Rome never had more cause.

The Goths have gather'd head ; and with a power

Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil,

They hither march amain, under conduct 65
Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus ;
Who threats, in course of this revenge, to do
As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths ?
These tidings nip me, and I hang the head 70
As flowers with frost or grass beat down with storms.

Ay, now begins our sorrows to approach.
'Tis he the common people love so much ;
Myself hath often heard them say,
When I have walked like a private man, 75
That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully,
And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor.

Tam. Why should you fear ? Is not your city strong ?

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius,
And will revolt from me to succour him. 80

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious, like thy name.
Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in it ?
The eagle suffers little birds to sing
And is not careful what they mean thereby,
Knowing that with the shadow of his wings 85
He can at pleasure stint their melody ;
Even so mayst thou the giddy men of Rome.
Then cheer thy spirit ; for know, thou emperor,
I will enchant the old Andronicus
With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,

Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks to sheep, 91
 Whenas the one is wounded with the bait,
 The other rotted with delicious feed.

Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will ; 95

For I can smooth and fill his aged ears
 With golden promises ; that, were his heart
 Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,
 Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.
 [To Æmilius.] Go thou before, be our ambassador.
 Say that the Emperor requests a parley 101
 Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting
 Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.

Sat. Æmilius, do this message honourably ;
 And if he stand on hostage for his safety, 105
 Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.

Æmil. Your bidding shall I do effectually. Exit.

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
 And temper him with all the art I have
 To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Goths.
 And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again, 111
 And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Sat. Then go successantly, and plead to him.

Exeunt.

ACT FIFTH

[Plains near Rome.]

Enter Lucius with an army of Goths, with drums and [colours].

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful friends,
I have received letters from great Rome,
Which signifies what hate they bear their emperor,
And how desirous of our sight they are.
Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness, 5
Imperious and impatient of your wrongs,
And wherein Rome hath done you any scathe,
Let him make treble satisfaction.

[1.] Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus,

Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort,
Whose high exploits and honourable deeds 11
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt,
Be bold in us ; we'll follow where thou lead'st,
Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day
Led by their master to the flow' red fields, 15
And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.

[All the Got^l] And as he saith, so say we all with him.

Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you all.
But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth, leading of Aaron with his Child in his arms.

[2.] Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I stray'd 20

To gaze upon a ruinous monastery ;

And, as I earnestly did fix mine eye

Upon the wasted building, suddenly

I heard a child cry underneath a wall.

I made unto the noise ; when soon I heard 25

The crying babe controll'd with this discourse :

“Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy dame !

Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou art,

Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,

Villain, thou mightst have been an emperor. 30

But where the bull and cow are both milk-white,

They never do beget a coal-black calf.

Peace, villain, peace !” — even thus he rates the babe, —

“For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth ;

Who, when he knows thou art the Empress' babe,
Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake.” 36

With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him,

Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him hither,

To use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth, this is the incarnate devil 40
That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand ;

This is the pearl that pleas'd your empress' eye,
 And here's the base fruit of her burning lust.
 Say, wall-eyed slave, whither wouldst thou convey

This growing image of thy fiend-like face? 45
 Why dost not speak? What, deaf? Not a word?
 A halter, soldiers! Hang him on this tree,
 And by his side his fruit of bastardy.

Aar. Touch not the boy; he is of royal blood.

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good. 50
 First hang the child, that he may see it sprawl;
 A sight to vex the father's soul withal.
 Get me a ladder.

[A ladder brought, which Aaron is made to ascend.]

Aar. Lucius, save the child,
 And bear it from me to the Empress.
 If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things, 55
 That highly may advantage thee to hear.
 If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
 I'll speak no more but "Vengeance rot you all!"

Luc. Say on; an if it please me which thou speak'st,
 Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd. 60

Aar. An if it please thee! Why, assure thee, Lucius,
 'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak;
 For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,
 Acts of black night, abominable deeds,
 Complots of mischief, treason, villainies, 65

Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd.
 And this shall all be buried in my death
 Unless thou swear to me my child shall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind ; I say thy child shall live.

Aar. Swear that he shall, and then I will begin. 70

Luc. Who should I swear by ? Thou believ'st no god :
 That granted, how canst thou believe an oath ?

Aar. What if I do not ? as, indeed, I do not ;
 Yet, for I know thou art religious
 And hast a thing within thee called conscience,
 With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies 76
 Which I have seen thee careful to observe,
 Therefore I urge thy oath ; for that I know
 An idiot holds his bauble for a god
 And keeps the oath which by that god he swears, 80
 To that I'll urge him. Therefore thou shalt vow
 By that same god, what god soe'er it be,
 That thou adorest and hast in reverence,
 To save my boy, to nourish and bring him up ;
 Or else I will discover nought to thee. 85

Luc. Even by my God I swear to thee I will.

Aar. First know thou, I begot him on the Empress.

Luc. O most insatiate and luxurious woman !

Aar. Tut, Lucius, this was but a deed of charity
 To that which thou shalt hear of me anon. 90
 'Twas her two sons that murdered Bassianus ;
 They cut thy sister's tongue, and ravish'd her,
 And cut her hands, and trimm'd her as thou saw'st.

Luc. O detestable villain ! call'st thou that trimming ?

Aar. Why, she was wash'd and cut and trimm'd, and

'twas 95

Trim sport for them which had the doing of it.

Luc. O barbarous, beastly villains, like thyself !

Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct them.

That coddling spirit had they from their mother,

As sure a card as ever won the set ; 100

That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me,

As true a dog as ever fought at head.

Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.

I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole

Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay ; 105

I wrote the letter that thy father found,

And hid the gold within that letter mention'd,

Confederate with the Queen and her two sons ;

And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue,

Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it ? 110

I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand,

And, when I had it, drew myself apart

And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.

I pried me through the crevice of a wall

When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads ; 115

Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily,

That both mine eyes were rainy like to his ;

And when I told the Empress of this sport,

She swoounded almost at my pleasing tale,

And for my tidings gave me twenty kisses. 120

[1.] Goth. What, canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.

Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds?

Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand more.

Even now I curse the day — and yet, I think, 125

Few come within the compass of my curse —

Wherein I did not some notorious ill,

As kill a man, or else devise his death,

Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it,

Accuse some innocent and forswear myself, 130

Set deadly enmity between two friends,

Make poor men's cattle break their necks,

Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,

And bid the owners quench them with their tears.

Oft have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,

And set them upright at their dear friends'
door,

Even when their sorrows almost was forgot ; 137

And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,

Have with my knife carved in Roman letters,

“Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead.” 140

Tut, I have done a thousand dreadful things

As willingly as one would kill a fly,

And nothing grieves me heartily indeed

But that I cannot do ten thousand more.

Luc. Bring down the devil, for he must not die
So sweet a death as hanging presently. 145

Aar. If there be devils, would I were a devil,
To live and burn in everlasting fire,
So I might have your company in hell,
But to torment you with my bitter tongue! 150

Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

[Enter a Goth.]

[3.] Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome
Desires to be admitted to your presence.

Luc. Let him come near.

Enter Æmilius.

Welcome, Æmilius! What's the news from Rome? 155

Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths,
The Roman Emperor greets you all by me;
And, for he understands you are in arms,
He craves a parley at your father's house,
Willing you to demand your hostages, 160
And they shall be immediately delivered.

[1.] Goth. What says our general?

Luc. Æmilius, let the Emperor give his pledges
Unto my father and my uncle Marcus,
And we will come. March away. 165

Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE II

[Rome. Before Titus's house.]

Enter Tamora, Demetrius, and Chiron, disguised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habiliment,
 I will encounter with Andronicus
 And say I am Revenge, sent from below
 To join with him and right his heinous wrongs.
 Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps 5
 To ruminat strange plots of dire revenge ;
 Tell him Revenge is come to join with him,
 And work confusion on his enemies. They knock.

Titus [above] opens his study door.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation ?
 Is it your trick to make me ope the door 10
 That so my sad decrees may fly away
 And all my study be to no effect ?
 You are deceiv'd ; for what I mean to do
 See here in bloody lines I have set down ;
 And what is written shall be executed. 15

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee.

Tit. No, not a word ; how can I grace my talk,
 Wanting a hand to give it action ?
 Thou hast the odds of me ; therefore no more.

Tam. If thou didst know me, thou would'st talk with
 me. 20

- Tit.* I am not mad, I know thee well enough ;
Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines ;
Witness these trenches made by grief and care ;
Witness the tiring day and heavy night ;
Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well 25
For our proud empress, mighty Tamora.
Is not thy coming for my other hand ?
- Tam.* Know, thou sad man, I am not Tamora ;
She is thy enemy, and I thy friend.
I am Revenge, sent from the infernal kingdom 30
To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind
By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes.
Come down, and welcome me to this world's light ;
Confer with me of murder and of death.
There's not a hollow cave or lurking-place, 35
No vast obscurity or misty vale,
Where bloody murder or detested rape
Can couch for fear, but I will find them out ;
And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,
Revenge, which makes the foul offender quake.
- Tit.* Art thou Revenge ? and art thou sent to me, 41
To be a torment to mine enemies ?
- Tam.* I am ; therefore come down, and welcome me.
- Tit.* Do me some service, ere I come to thee.
Lo, by thy side where Rape and Murder stands ;
Now give some surance that thou art Revenge, 46

Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot-wheels ;
 And then I'll come and be thy waggoner,
 And whirl along with thee about the globes.
 Provide thee two proper palfreys, black as jet, 50
 To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,
 And find out murderers in their guilty caves ;
 And when thy car is loaden with their heads,
 I will dismount, and by the waggon-wheel
 Trot, like a servile footman, all day long, 55
 Even from Hyperion's rising in the east
 Until his very downfall in the sea ;
 And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
 So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me. 60

Tit. Are these thy ministers ? What are they call'd ?

Tam. Rape and Murder ; therefore called so,
 'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tit. Good Lord, how like the Empress' sons they are !
 And you, the Empress ! but we worldly men 65
 Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.

O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee ;
 And, if one arm's embracement will content thee,
 I will embrace thee in it by and by. [Exit above.]

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy. 70

Whate'er I forge to feed his brain-sick humours,
 Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches,
 For now he firmly takes me for Revenge ;
 And, being credulous in this mad thought,

I'll make him send for Lucius his son ; 75
 And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,
 I'll find some cunning practice out of hand,
 To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
 Or, at the least, make them his enemies.
 See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme. 80

[Enter Titus below.]

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee.
 Welcome, dread Fury, to my woeful house ;
 Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too.
 How like the Empress and her sons you are !
 Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor ; 85
 Could not all hell afford you such a devil ?
 For well I wot the Empress never wags
 But in her company there is a Moor ;
 And, would you represent our queen aright,
 It were convenient you had such a devil. 90
 But welcome, as you are. What shall we do ?

Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus ?

Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with him.

Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a rape,
 And I am sent to be reveng'd on him. 95

Tam. Show me a thousand that have done thee wrong,
 And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome ;
 And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,
 Good Murder, stab him ; he's a murderer. 100

Go thou with him ; and when it is thy hap
 To find another that is like to thee,
 Good Rapine, stab him ; he's a ravisher.
 Go thou with them ; and in the Emperor's court
 There is a queen, attended by a Moor ; 105
 Well shalt thou know her by thine own proportion,

For up and down she doth resemble thee.
 I pray thee, do on them some violent death ;
 They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us ; this shall we do. 110
 But would it please thee, good Andronicus,
 To send for Lucius, thy thrice-valiant son,
 Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike Goths,
 And bid him come and banquet at thy house ;
 When he is here, even at thy solemn feast, 115
 I will bring in the Empress and her sons,
 The Emperor himself and all thy foes ;
 And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,
 And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.
 What says Andronicus to this device ? 120

Tit. Marcus, my brother ! 'tis sad Titus calls.

Enter Marcus.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius ;
 Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths :
 Bid him repair to me, and bring with him

Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths. 125

Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are.

Tell him the Emperor and the Empress too

Feast at my house, and he shall feast with them.

This do thou for my love ; and so let him,

As he regards his aged father's life. 130

Marc. This will I do, and soon return again. [Exit.]

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,

And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me ;

Or else I'll call my brother back again, 135

And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. [Aside to her sons.] What say you, boys ? Will you abide with him

Whiles I go tell my lord the Emperor

How I have govern'd our determin'd jest ?

Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair,

And tarry with him till I turn again. 141

Tit. [Aside.] I knew them all though they supposed me mad,

And will o'erreach them in their own devices.

A pair of cursed hell-hounds and their dam !

Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure ; leave us here. 145

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus ! Revenge now goes

To lay a complot to betray thy foes.

Tit. I know thou dost ; and, sweet Revenge, farewell.

[Exit Tamora.]

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd ?

Tit. Tut, I have work enough for you to do. 150
Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine !

[Enter Publius and others.]

Pub. What is your will ?

Tit. Know you these two ?

Pub. The Empress' sons, I take them, Chiron,
Demetrius. 155

Tit. Fie, Publius, fie ! thou art too much deceiv'd.
The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name ;
And therefore bind them, gentle Publius.
Caius and Valentine, lay hands on them.
Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour, 160
And now I find it ; therefore bind them sure,
And stop their mouths if they begin to cry.

[Exit Titus. Publius, etc., lay hold on Chiron and Demetrius.]

Chi. Villains, forbear ! we are the Empress' sons.

Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded.
Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a word. 165

Is he sure bound ? Look that you bind them fast.

Re-enter Titus with a knife, and Lavinia with a basin.

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia ; look, thy foes are bound.
Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to me,
But let them hear what fearful words I utter.
O villains, Chiron and Demetrius ! 170

Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud,

This goodly summer with your winter mix'd.

You kill'd her husband, and for that vile fault

Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death,

My hand cut off and made a merry jest ; 175

Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that more
dear

Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,

Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.

What would you say if I should let you speak ?

Villains, for shame you could not beg for grace. 180

Hark, wretches ! how I mean to martyr you.

This one hand yet is left to cut your throats,

Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold

The basin that receives your guilty blood.

You know your mother means to feast with me, 185

And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me mad.

Hark, villains ! I will grind your bones to dust

And with your blood and it I'll make a paste,

And of the paste a coffin I will rear

And make two pasties of your shameful heads, 190

And bid that strumpet, your unhallowed dam,

Like to the earth swallow her own increase.

This is the feast that I have bid her to,

And this the banquet she shall surfeit on ;

For worse than Philomel you us'd my daughter,

And worse than Progne I will be reveng'd, 196

And now prepare your throats. Lavinia, come,
 Receive the blood ; and when that they are dead,
 Let me go grind their bones to powder small
 And with this hateful liquor temper it ; 200
 And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd.
 Come, come, be every one officious
 To make this banquet ; which I wish may prove
 More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast.

He cuts their throats.

So, now bring them in, for I'll play the cook, 205
 And see them ready against their mother comes.

Exeunt [bearing the dead bodies].

SCENE III

[Court of Titus's house.]

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and Goths [with Aaron prisoner].

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind
 That I repair to Rome, I am content.

[1.] Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune will.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Moor,
 This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil ; 5
 Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,
 Till he be brought unto the Empress' face,
 For testimony of her foul proceedings.
 And see the ambush of our friends be strong ;
 I fear the Emperor means no good to us. 10

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear,
And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth
The venomous malice of my swelling heart !

Luc. Away, inhuman dog ! unhallowed slave !
Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in. 15 [Exeunt Goths, with Aaron.] Flourish [within].
The trumpets show the Emperor is at hand.

Sound trumpets. Enter Saturninus and Tamora, with [Emilius,] Tribunes, [Senators,] and others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament moe suns than one ?

Luc. What boots it thee to call thyself a sun ?

Marc. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parle ;
These quarrels must be quietly debated. 20
The feast is ready, which the careful Titus
Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,
For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome.
Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places.

Sat. Marcus, we will. 25
Hautboys. A table brought in. [The com- pany sit down.]

Sound trumpets. Enter Titus like a cook, placing the meat on the table ; Lavinia with a veil over her face ;
[young Lucius and others].

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord ; welcome, dread
queen ;

Welcome, ye warlike Goths ; welcome, Lucius ;
 And welcome, all ! Although the cheer be poor,
 'Twill fill your stomachs ; please you eat of it.

Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus ? 30

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well,
 To entertain your Highness and your empress.

Tam. We are beholding to you, good Andronicus.

Tit. An if your Highness knew my heart, you were.
 My lord the Emperor, resolve me this : 35
 Was it well done of rash Virginius

To slay his daughter with his own right hand,
 Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflower'd ?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord ? 40

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame,
 And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual ;
 A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant
 For me, most wretched, to perform the like. 45
 Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee ;
 And, with thy shame, thy father's sorrow die !

Kills Lavinia.

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural and unkind ?

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.
 I am as woeful as Virginius was, 50
 And have a thousand times more cause than he
 To do this outrage ; and it now is done.

Sat. What, was she ravish'd ? Tell who did the deed.

Tit. Will't please you eat? Will't please your Highness feed?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?

Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius. 56

They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue;

And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sat. Go fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pie; 60

Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,

Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.

'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point.

Stabs Tamora.

Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed!

[Kills Titus.]

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed? 65

There's meed for meed, death for a deadly deed!

[Kills Saturninus. A great tumult. Lucius,

Marcus, and others go up into the balcony.]

Marc. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome,

By uproars sever'd, as a flight of fowl

Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,

O, let me teach you how to knit again 70

This scatt' red corn into one mutual sheaf,

These broken limbs again into one body;

Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself,

And she whom mighty kingdoms curtsy to,

Like a forlorn and desperate castaway, 75

Do shameful execution on herself.

Lastly, myself unkindly banished,
The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out 105
To beg relief among Rome's enemies,
Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,
And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend.
I am the turned forth, be it known to you,
That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood ; 110
And from her bosom took the enemy's point,
Sheathing the steel in my advent'rous body.
Alas, you know I am no vaunter, I ;
My scars can witness, dumb although they are,
That my report is just and full of truth. 115
But, soft ! methinks I do digress too much,
Citing my worthless praise. O, pardon me ;
For when no friends are by, men praise themselves.

Marc. Now is my turn to speak. Behold the child :

[Pointing to the Child in the arms of an Attendant.]

Of this was Tamora delivered, 120
The issue of an irreligious Moor,
Chief architect and plotter of these woes.
The villain is alive in Titus' house,
And as he is, to witness this is true.
Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge 125
These wrongs unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.
Now you have heard the truth, what say you,
Romans ?

Have we done aught amiss? Show us wherein,
And, from the place where you behold us now, 130

The poor remainder of Andronici

Will, hand in hand, all headlong hurl ourselves,
And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutual closure of our house.

Speak, Romans, speak; and if you say we shall, 135
Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.

Æmil. Come, come, thou reverend man of Rome,
And bring our emperor gently in thy hand,

Lucius our emperor; for well I know

The common voice do cry it shall be so. 140

[All.] Lucius, all hail, Rome's royal Emperor!

Marc. Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house,

[To Attendants.]

And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,

To be adjudg'd some direful slaught'ring death,

As punishment for his most wicked life. 145

[Exeunt Attendants.]

Lucius, Marcus, and the others descend.

[All.] Lucius, all hail, Rome's gracious governor!

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans; may I govern so,

To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe!

But, gentle people, give me aim a while,

For nature puts me to a heavy task. 150

Stand all aloof, but, uncle, draw you near,

To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk.

O, take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,
[Kissing Titus.]

These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd face,
 The last true duties of thy noble son ! 155

Marc. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
 Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips.
 O, were the sum of these that I should pay
 Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them ! 159

Luc. Come hither, boy ; come, come, and learn of us
 To melt in showers ; thy grandsire lov'd thee well.
 Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee,
 Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow ;
 Many a story hath he told to thee,
 And bid thee bear his pretty tales in mind, 165
 And talk of them when he was dead and gone.

Marc. How many thousand times hath these poor lips,
 When they were living, warmed themselves on thine !
 O now, sweet boy, give them their latest kiss ;
 Bid him farewell ; commit him to the grave ; 170
 Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.

Young Luc. O grandsire, grandsire ! even with all my heart
 Would I were dead, so you did live again !
 O Lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping ;
 My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth. 175

[Re-enter Attendants with Aaron.]

A Roman. You sad Andronici, have done with woes.

Give sentence on this execrable wretch
That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him ;
There let him stand and rave and cry for food. 180
If any one relieves or pities him,
For the offence he dies. This is our doom.
Some stay to see him fast'ned in the earth.

Aar. Ah, why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb ?
I am no baby, I, that with base prayers 185
I should repent the evils I have done.
Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
Would I perform, if I might have my will.
If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul. 190

Luc. Some loving friends convey the Emperor hence,
And give him burial in his father's grave.
My father and Lavinia shall forthwith
Be closed in our household's monument.
As for that ravenous tiger, Tamora, 195
No funeral rite, nor man in mourning weed ;
No mournful bell shall ring her burial ;
But throw her forth to beasts and birds to prey.
Her life was beastly, and devoid of pity ;
And, being dead, let birds on her take pity. 200
See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd Moor,
By whom our heavy haps had their beginning.
Then, afterwards, to order well the state,
That like events may ne'er it ruin. Exeunt.

Notes

The Qq have no division into Acts or Scenes. The Ff begin with Actus Primus, Scæna Prima, but thereafter give only division into Acts. The division into Scenes, and the list of Dramatis Personæ were first made by Rowe.

I. i. 35. At this point in Q₁ is a passage of five lines missing in later texts. See Textual Variants.

I. i. 40. succeed. Succeeded.

I. i. 42. pretend. Claim.

I. i. 43. strength. Military strength. Cf. power, III. i. 300.

I. i. 69. The stage-directions here and throughout the play indicate the pleasure of poet and people in martial sounds and pageantry.

I. i. 77. defender of the Capitol. Jupiter Capitolinus.

I. i. 92. receptacle. Accented on first and third syllables.

I. i. 98. ad manes fratrum. To the shades of our brethren. Such sacrifices were unknown in Rome, but the author may have derived the motive from classical drama.

I. i. 127. fire. A dissyllable.

I. i. 131. Scythia. Cf. King Lear, I. i. 16.

I. i. 136. the Queen of Troy. Hecuba.

I. i. 138. the Thracian tyrant. Polymnestor, who killed the son of Hecuba.

I. i. 177. By several examples Solon showed Cræsus, king of Lydia, that the highest happiness was honour, even in death. Solon is also credited with the saying, "Call no man happy till he is dead."

I. i. 185. candidatus. The author confuses the election of an emperor with that of a consul. The latter, as he sought the votes of the people, wore a white robe, and hence was called candidatus.

I. i. 201. obtain and ask. Ask and obtain.

I. i. 240. empress. A dissyllable. Cf. I. i. 320; door, I. i. 288; brethren, I. i. 348, etc.

I. i. 291. Titus's giving his daughter to whom he pleased and his killing his son who defied him were not crimes in Roman law.

I. i. 323. Priest and holy water suggests a Catholic or English marriage. Another anachronism is the "ruinous monastery," V. i. 21.

I. i. 368. not with himself. Beside himself.

I. i. 379. Cf. the Ajax of Sophocles. In ancient times one guilty of a crime was not buried, or not honourably buried.

I. i. 394. I know it is. I.e., I know it is so.

II. i. 14. mount her pitch. A falconer's term which here means "rise as high as she."

II. i. 37. Clubs, clubs! The cry to call forth the London apprentices, who had clubs for weapons.

II. i. 70. discord's ground. A pun upon ground and discord in the ordinary sense and the musical. Ground was the melody.

II. i. 82-83. These lines are echoed in 1 Henry VI, V. iii. 78-79, and Richard III, I. ii. 228-229. The sentiment appears repeatedly in the early work of Greene, but the phrasing is new, and on the strength of this and other similarities we are not justified in inferring that Greene wrote this part of the play.

II. i. 85-86. A proverbial saying.

II. i. 89. worn. A dissyllable. — Vulcan's badge. The dishonour of an unfaithful wife, referring to the intrigue of Mars and Venus.

II. i. 103. Join for that you jar. Make up your differences.

II. i. 126. house of Fame. The allusion is to Virgil's conception in Æneid, IV. 183, 184, as copied by Chaucer in The Hous of Fame, 1379-1390.

II. i. 133, 135. Sit fas, etc. Be it right or wrong. Per Styga, etc. Through Styx I am borne and through the realm of the dead. Both are from Seneca, Phœdra, 1180, 1181.

II. ii. 1-2. Compare Peele, Old Wives Tale, 350, 351:

The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey.

The lark is merry, and records her notes.

II. ii. 1. grey. Bright. Applied to the sunless light of early morning. The word cannot mean dull or cloudy.

II. ii. 9-10. Premonitions of a purely physical character, unlike Hamlet's presentiment before the fencing match, are characteristic of early Elizabethan Senecan tragedy. Cf. II. iii. 195, 210-213.

II. ii. 21. The panther is no more native to the Roman forest than the lion is to Arden, in As You Like It.

II. iii. 8-9. He has taken the gold from Tamora's chest.

II. iii. 13, 15-16. Cf. Seneca, Phædra, 508 f.

II. iii. 39. In earlier plays, those of both Lodge and Greene, for instance, are to be found parallel expressions.

II. iii. 55. Who. Whom. Not uncommon in Elizabethan drama.

II. iii. 63. horns. The usual Elizabethan allusion to the horns of the cuckold.

II. iii. 86-87. Tamora's unfaithfulness has long made the Emperor a laughing-stock.

II. iii. 92-104. In this scene there is either a change of place, implying that the characters have been walking as they talk, or else, in the desire to make the landscape fit the occasion (cf. IV. i. 53-58), the poet forgets Tamora's very different description of it in ll. 11-15. Instances of change of place within a scene are not rare in early plays, and were, of course, less noticeable in the absence of scenery. Cf. Jew of Malta, II. iii.

II. iii. 110. Goth. There is a pun on the word goat. Cf. As You Like It, III. iii. 7-9.

II. iii. 126. painted. Unreal. The line is faulty metrically, and has been much amended. F₂₋₄ insert she before braves, thus making an Alexandrine.

II. iii. 151. The lion moved with pity. Usually explained as referring to the story of Androclus, who was spared in the arena by a lion from whose paw he had once removed a thorn. But no version of the story is known which speaks of his paring the paws, or "claws" as some modern editors emend the line.

II. iii. 153-154. It is an ancient notion that ravens leave their young until they grow feathers, to be fed by the hand of God with the dew of heaven. The fostering of children by ravens seems to be folk-lore, as it is again alluded to in Winter's Tale, II. iii. 186.

II. iii. 195. Cf. note on II. ii. 9-10, above.

II. iii. 227. The jewel is possibly the mythical carbuncle which shed light instead of reflecting it. But often in the literature of the time, as in The Faerie Queene, jewels and even armour are represented as radiating light in darkness.

II. iv. 6. sweet water. Perfumed water.

II. iv. 14. The baleful influence of planets is meant. Cf. Hamlet, I. i. 162.

II. iv. 26. See Introduction for the poet's indebtedness to Ovid's story of Tereus and Philomela.

II. iv. 51. The allusion is to the effect of Orpheus's music as he descended into Hades for Eurydice.

III. i. 11. Lying or sitting down on the earth is a bit of "business" common in these early plays as a sign of utter grief. Cf. Richard II, III. ii. 155; Richard III, IV. iv. 29 ff.

III. i. 82. engine. See Glossary. Cf. Venus and Adonis, l. 367.

"Once more the engine of her thoughts began."

III. i. 91. deer. The usual pun on the word is intended.

III. i. 170. castle. Theobald emended this to casque and Walker to crest. The expression in the text is certainly peculiar.

III. i. 189. Aaron means that he will never incline to deccits so generous.

III. i. 231. For why. Because.

III. i. 280 ff. They clear these ghastly properties away to prepare for the next scene.

III. i. 282. The corruption of the passage is attested by the rhythm. See Textual Variants.

III. ii. This entire scene was added in the First Folio.

III. ii. 15. Each sigh was supposed to draw a drop of blood from the heart. Hence "blood-drinking," "blood-sucking sighs," 3 Henry VI, IV. iv. 22.

III. ii. 25-30. The passage is quite similar in spirit and taste to the following from The Spanish Tragedy, III. xiii:

And thou and I and she will sing a song,
Three parts in one, but all of discords framed:—
Talke not of cords, but let us now be gone,
For with a cord Horatio was slaine.

IV. i. 20. Hecuba ran mad after avenging her son upon Polymnestor.

IV. i. 81-82. Magni Dominator, etc. "Lord of the mighty heavens, dost thou so mildly hear, so mildly see such crimes?" Latin, preferably a quotation from Seneca, was, for supreme moments of anguish, a common dramatic device in the school of Kyd. This, somewhat modified, is from the Phædra, 671.

IV. i. 105. Sibyl's leaves. Cf. Æneid, VI. 75.

IV. i. 109. base. Q₂ reads bad, which may be the right reading.

IV. i. 129. the heavens. Emended by Johnson and others to ye heavens. But Herford observed that the expression is idiomatic English as it stands.

IV. ii. 20. "He who is pure of life and unstained with crime needs not bow or Moorish dart." Horace, Odes, I. 22.

IV. ii. 26. no sound jest. This is more than a jest.

IV. ii. 31. Cf. The Spanish Tragedy, I. iii. 5: "Then rest we heere a while in our unrest." Also ibid., III. xiii. 29-30, and Richard III, IV. iv. 29.

IV. ii. 144. A proverb. Cf. Romeo and Juliet, II. iv. 209.

IV. ii. 164. gallant grooms. "Stout fellows."

IV. ii. 175. thick-lipp'd. Everywhere in the play Aaron and his child, though Moors, are represented as negroes. Cf. II. iii. 34-35. So Peele conceives his Muly Mahamet and Shakespeare his Othello.

IV. iii. 4. "Astræa, or Justice, has left the earth." Ovid, Metamorphoses, I. 150.

IV. iii. 11 ff. This notion of digging in the earth to reach Pluto and demand justice of him is presented directly on the stage in The Spanish Tragedy, III. xii. 71, where Hieronimo digs the earth with his dagger to reach the underworld and bring back his son.

IV. iii. 24. go pipe. To-day we say "go whistle."

IV. iii. 53, 54. Ad Jovem, Ad Apollinem, Ad Martem. To Jupiter, to Apollo, to Mars.

IV. iii. 59. of my word. On my word.

IV. iii. 63. well said. Well done.

IV. iii. 71-72. The Bull (Taurus) and the Ram (Aries) are signs of the zodiac.

V. i. 15. master. Queen bee. Cf. Henry V, I. ii. 190.

V. i. 27. tawny. This means not "yellowish-brown" but dark or black. It does not contradict the previous statement that the child was a blackamoor, IV. ii. 51.

V. i. 42. pearl. There was a proverb which ran: "A black man [a man of dark complexion] is a pearl in a fair woman's eye."

V. i. 53. Get me a ladder. This is brought to hang Aaron. In the Quartos and Folios the speech is attributed to Aaron himself.

V. i. 61 ff. This speech and that at lines 124-144, in which Aaron vaingloriously tells the beadroll of his sins, are parallel to two in The Jew of Malta, II. iii. 180-220.

V. i. 122. Cf. "Hee blusheth like a blacke dogge, he hath a brazen face." Withals's Adagia, ed. 1634, p. 557.

V. ii. 204. Centaur's feast. The battle between the Centaurs and the Lapithæ at the wedding of Pirithous.

V. iii. 3. ours with thine. Our will as well as thine.

V. iii. 38. In the allusion the story of Virginia is confused, perhaps with that of Lucrece.

V. iii. 48. unkind. The word means the same as unnatural.

V. iii. 80. our ancestor. Æneas.

V. iii. 124. as he is. The meaning seems to be that were it not for the need of him as witness he would not now be left alive.

V. iii. 164-170. See Textual Variants.
